Three Men Buried Under Tons Of Debris For 14 Hours Tell Story Of Rescue

A tale of miraculous escape after spending nearly 14 hours buried beneath tons and tons of brick, steel, wood and pulp is told by three Kimberly men taken from the ruins of the collapsed beater room of the Kimberly mill, which collopsed Friday morning carying six men to their deaths and injuring 19 more. The men taken from the pit at 12 o'clock Friday night were Chester Mauthe, 20, married six weeks ago; George Pocan, 18, single; and Albert Jansen, 21.

The three men, with Arthur Brockman, 40, Kimberly, who died of injuries after being taken from the pit, were working together unloading pulp from trucks and storing it on the top floor. A truck had just been unloaded and Mauthe, Jansen and Pocan were sitting atop the pulp pile while Brockman had pulled the truck to the elevator to bring back another load.

Without warning there was a crash and the three men sitting on top of the pile were precipitated into a roaring inferno of flying bricks, steel, machinery, wires, pipes, masonry, pulp and lumber.

THOUGHT OF EARTHQUAKE

"I didn't know what happened but thought of an earthquake," said Mauthe. He talked in a low even tone, despite the hours of suspense in a small dark hole beneath tons of debris with the threat of death constantly staring him in the face.

"I looked above me and saw a huge black form coming down. I think it was a beater. There was a sudden flash, like lightning, as I passed a switch box which was caught in the collapse. I burned my arm against a hot pipe as I fell. The air was filled with steam, and dust and flying bricks and stones and I thought I was a goner, sure.

"I landed on top of Pocan in a hole not more than four feet long and a foot and a half wide and the tons of pulp above us stopped about a foot above our heads. After the noise had died down Pocan told me Jansen was beneath us and couldn't breath. I had landed in a sitting position. My two legs were doubled up to my chin under the pile of pulp and more pulp was pressing on the back of my neck. I was doubled up and couldn't move. Pocan managed to squeeze to one side enough to allow Jansen to turn his nose from the floor, so he could breath.

AFRAID TO MOVE

"I cautioned the fellows not to move because I was afraid any movement would bring that pile of pulp on us and crush us. It was pitch black and we could hear men hollering to the right and left of us. We called out too, but no one seemed to hear.

"First we prayed, then we talked to keep up our courage and then we would cry for help. The pain in my legs was growing almost unbearable and at last I didn't care whether I died or not. But I kept telling the fellows to be brave and that we would be rescued.

ATTRACTS RESCUERS

"We could hear the men working above us and shout for help but they seemed not to hear because the sounds would fade away. We prayed some more and waited. The suspense was awful. It didn't seem possible that we would get out alive. Finally I heard another man walking above me and I hollered. He seemed to hear because immediately digging started above us. As the rescuers came closer, the pulp began pressing down from above and we were afraid that it might crush us before the digger could reach us. The pulp kept advancing inch by inch until, when finally the picks broke through, it was but an inch or two above us. Believe me, we thanked God when we got out." Mauthe finished. Mauthe suffered a broken leg but the other two men were uninjured.

Pocan's story was similar to that of Mauthe, except he said he never doubted they would get out. He said they spent most of their time praying. Pocan said they thought it was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon when they were taken from the pit. Jansen was too busy consoling his mother and sister early Saturday morning to be able to talk. All three were crying and talking and laughing.

First to greet Pocan when he was taken out were his brothers, Clarence and Joseph, who started work with him at 7 o'clock Friday morning and another brother, Arnold, who arrived from Milwaukee at 6 o'clock Friday evening. The three brothers worked unceasingly and were rewarded by finding their "kid brother" alive.

One of the early arrivals at the accident was the Rev. F. X. Van Nistleroy, pastor of Holy Name church at Kimberly. He attempted to reach the rumors but was stopped by one of the deputized guards.

"You can't help down there father," said the guard.

PRIEST WADES IN WATER

"If I cannot save lives, perhaps I can save souls," the priest answered and waded about waist deep in water at times consoling the injured.

Another example of heroism was displayed by Martin VerKuilen of Medina, who held his unconscious companion, Nic Fox, out of the water into which they were hurled when the rear of their dump truck was caught by the falling walls. The two were rescued by a boat and taken to the hospital where it was reported VerKuilen, although badly cut was not seriously hurt. Fox's skull is crushed and his condition is critical.

By a trick of fate, Henry Huber, employed as assistant beaterman on the first floor of the ruined section, had been sent outside the building a minute before the accident on the other hand John Fiers, an oiler, who visits that section of the mill only a few mintues each day, was caught in the crush and killed.

EXPERT ON INDIANS WITNESS IN CANADA

Says Money Would Be Distributed Equally if Claims Were Allowed

Montreal, Que.—(AP)—Indians in the United States were citizens of the state in which they lived, but their independence has not been recognized by the United States Supreme court since 1871, Fernando Trambarger of Indian office of the United States Department of the Interior Friday testified in the trial of Mr. and Mrs. Orrin J. Kellogg and Chief W. K. Cornelius of Wisconsin.

The defendants are being tried on charges to defraud Canadian Indians in connection with the New York land claims of the Six Nations.

Questioned by the crown, as an expert Indian affairs in his own country, Mr. Trambarger said that if any settlement of the New York land claim was made with the Indians the moneys so obtained would be distributed equally to all duly enrolled Indians by the United States government and that subscription or non-subscription to the fund for the pursuance of the case would have no effect on the distribution.

TROUBLE IN MEXICO MAY AID MORROW

New Ambassador Takes Helm at Time When Calles Must Weaken Stand

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright 1927, by Post Pub. Co.

Washington—Sending an ambassador to Mexico in the midst of the troublous internal situation that faces the Calles government may prove a lucky turn for American policy.

Usually when a Mexican administration gets itself into revolutionary difficulties, there is a tendency to be less aggressive about external policy. This is all the more important to the Calles government because it is within the power of the American government to lift the embargo on arms, which would give a rebellious faction an equal opportunity with the constituted government to get ammunition.

No such threat, of course, is being made at this time, as the new American ambassador, Dwight W. Morrow, goes to Mexico with the olive branch of peace. Every effort will be made by him to work out an understanding which will forever dispose of the controversy over oil and agrarian laws. It so happens that Mexico will need financial aid from the outside and particularly now when the expense of squelching revolutions is beginning to accumulate. The truth is Mexican financers are in an unfavorable position anyhow, so that from this aspect as well as considerations of good will in a time of revolution, the Calles government will be anxious to meet Mr. Morrow more than half way.

EXPECT NO OPPOSITION

Incidentally very little talk is heard here about opposing the confirmation of Mr. Morrow when the senate formally receives his name next December. It is fully expected that Mr. Morrow will be at his post within the next ten days and will have gone so deeply into the Mexican situation by December that opposition to his confirmation will be regarded as futile.

Reports from Mexico do not indicate as yet the extent of the disturbances, though it is felt here that the revolutionary spirit is growing in the southern republic. Tales of persecution for mere political opposition are beginning to trial across the border and the friends of General Serrano, who was executed are already claiming that he was actually captured in the city of Mexico and taken to a suburb so as to give the appearance of having revolted.

The story that General Quijano was duped by a superior officer in marching troops outside the capital, is only one of a number of things that have trickled through the censorship, which has been rather rigid within the last few days. The Mexican government is willing to let the outside world know how vigorously it is dealing with the so-called rebels, but the details of the intrigue behind the executions of prominent army officers have not come to light. In some quarters here the opinion is expressed that the executed generals may be regarded as martyrs for disaffected elements to rally around.

TROUBLE IN AIR

The ability of the central government to present revolutionary outbreaks in the federal district of Mexico City is unquestioned, but when guerrila warfare starts in the northern regions and some of the idle peasants and ever-ready bandits are gathered together to tear up railroads and otherwise embarrass the federal government, there are always possibilities of trouble that will not end so quickly. In other words, there is a feeling here that the executions will not end Mexico's internal troubles, but will fan the flames of revolt, a circumstance that may present the holding of the presidential election next year.

So far as the American government is concerned, it is taking no part other than that of interested observer, and Mr. Morrow's mission will be concerned chiefly with the ironing out of legal and commercial disputes.

NEW LONDON BOY IS KILLED IN DASHING BEFORE MILK TRUCK

New London — Hartford, 7-year-old son of Mrs. Pearl Conn, was instantly killed at about 9 o'clock Saturday morning when he was struck by a milk truck, driven by Alfred Knapp, Jr., of Maple Creek. The boy, with a group of companions, was on his way to play football when one of his comrades tossed the ball into Shawano-st. near the intersection with Broad-st. Hartford ran to retrieve the football, failing to observe the truck, whose driver was unable to stop in time to avert the tragedy.

Mr. Knapp picked up the boy and carried him into the home of Ira McFaul. A physician declared that death had been instantaneous, the result of a broken neck and crushed chest. The left arm and hand also were crushed. The body was removed later to the Fehrman Undertaking parlors.

Wright Won't Take Stand; Quash Case Against Wife

Madison—(AP)—Miriam Noel Wright was freed of charge of misuse of the mails here Saturday when her divorced husband, Frank Lloyd Wright, noted architect, refused to appear as the chief witness against her.

Assistant United States District Harold E. Hanson asked that the case against Mrs. Wright be dismissed as preliminary hearing on the charge opened. She was at liberty under $500 bail. The charge was based on a letter "expressing her opinion" of Mr. Wright, addressed directly to him. It was turned over to federal authorities in Washington during late September and Mrs. Wright was arrested in her hotel here Thursday night.

District Attorney Hanson, in asking U. S. Court Commissioner Chauncey E. Blake for dismissal of the charge, said that "while the relationship between these two people has been a source of disgust to the greater part of the American people during a large part of the last three years and has been a sort of evil influence upon the younger generation, the fact that the recipient of this letter refuses to testify against the defendant compels me to ask that the case be dismissed."

The small courtroom on the old federal building here was crowded, mostly with women, for the preliminary hearing.

Mrs. Wright sat impassively throughout the entire proceeding. There was a gasp of surprise from the crowd as Mr. Hanson made his request.

BISHOP MULDOON DIES IN ILLINOIS

Was First Head of Rockford Diocese Which Was Formed in 1908

Rockford, Ill.—(AP)—The Right Rev. Muldoon, bishop of Rockford Catholic diocese, died at his home here at 6.10 Saturday morning after a long illness.

A life that began in California, budded into priesthood in New York, and flowered into a bishopric in Illinois, was Peter J. Muldoon's. This son of Irish immigrants devoted 40 of his 64 years to his church and 26 of these were served as bishop.

The diocese of Rockford never has had any other administrator. It was in 1908 that Bishop Muldoon was chosen to administer the newly-formed diocese.

A general breakdown in health came shortly after the close of the Eucharistic congress in Chicago last year.

OFFICIALS OF COMPANY ASK FOR INQUEST

Hearing Will Be Held at Courthouse Monday Morning Ellsworth Announces

3 MORE MEN ARE RESCUED

Workmen Confident They Know Positions of 3 Employes Still in Wreckage

The toll of dead and injured in the Kimberly mill catastrophe Friday morning was six dead and eighteen hurt, some seriously, shortly after noon today. A statement from officials of the Kimberly-Clark Co. said five persons are still believed to be in the ruins but of these five, two are listed among the dead. They are John Fiers, an oiler and Herman Sprangers. Nothing is known of the fate of Frank Johnson, J. Manders and J. Despins, believed to be in the ruins.

Hope for their rescue alive was given new impetus about midnight when rescue workers pulled out George Pocan, Jr., Chester Mauthe and Albert Jansen from hole in which they had been dropped when the walls collapsed. They were buried under tons and tons of wreckage for 14 hours and only Mauthe was injured. One of his legs was broken. The other two men were able to walk and probably will be discharged from the hospital in a short time. Pocan requested that the ambulance stop at his home so that he might run in and assure his mother of his rescue.

Coroner H. E. Ellsworth, Appleton, announced Saturday morning he would call an inquest at the courthouse at 9 o'clock Monday morning. District Atorney John A. Lonsdorf will assist Mr. Ellsworth. The inquest is being called at the request of Kimberly-Clark company officials. Dr. Ellsworth said. Superintendents at the plant, construction experts and a representative of the state industrial commission will attend the inquest. C. A. Halbert, state engineer also may attend. Members of the jury, selected Saturday afternoon are:

George Artz, Edward Poole, Emil Zeidler, Joseph Schweitzer, Albert Rehbein and A. J. Koch.

In a statement issued by mill officials Saturday noon it was announced that the pay of all employes, whether called for emergency work or not, would be continued. Workmen called for emergency service are to receive time and one-half for their services. A coffer dam is to be built around the face of the collapsed section of the building which fronts on the Fox river, on the possibility that some men may stil be in the flume beneath the section. Following is the statement of the company:

"At a conference Saturday morning between the local mill management and F. J. Sensenbrenner, First Vice-President, Ernst Mahler, General Superintendent, Harry Price, Secretary and other directors of the company, the action of yesterday closing all operating departments of the plant until all work of rescue is finished, was confirmed."

"Pay of all employees of the Kimberly plant of the Kimberly-Clark Company will be continued whether called upon for emergency service or not."

"Those called in for work of rescue or other emergency service will be paid time and one-half."

"A coffer dam surrounding the face of the collapsed section of building which fronts on the river will be immediately begun."

"On the possibility that some of the missing men may be in the flume which underlies a portion of this wreckage, it is deemed advisable to exclude the water."

"Clean-out of stock in mill systems and repair of water pumps and mains will be attended to at once."

"Other than jobs of this character all work about the plant will be suspended to the end that every energy of the Kimberly-Clark Company and C. R. Meyer & Sons may be bent to the work of rescue."

200 DAIRYMEN AT FREEDOM CONSIDER PROBLEMS OF FARM

Congressman Schneider Tells Cheese Makers Farmers Must Be Organized

BY W. F. WINSEY

Freedom—Two hundred dairymen representing 12 cheese factories in the towns of Freedom, Osborn, Kaukauna Seymour, Center and Vandenbrook, assembled in Vandenburg's hall Thursday evening, any considered and compared the problems of individual and cooperative marketing of cheese and other farm products

Among the speakers was George Schneider, congressional representative of the 9th district. Others were R. H Fisher, district attorney, Shawano-co A. C. Murphy, agricultural agent, Shawano-c, Frank Swoboda manager of the Wisconsin Cheese Producers, and Charles Grode, director of the Wisconsin Cheese Producers' Federation. These speakers, dealt with important factors of organization and cooperative marketing.

"What is wrong with farmers organizing and getting together for the marketing of the products?" demanded Mr. Swoboda, at the opening of his argument "What is wrong with laborers getting together to improve their condition? Who has a greater right to market a farmer's product than the farmer himself? Farmers may make mistakes in marketing their products. But dealers often make mistakes. For every dollar a farmers loses through marketing his own products, he loses $25 through letting some one else do his marketing for him"

Congressman Schneider said that government officials from the president down recognize that the farmer is not getting a fair division of profits of his industry and all are anxious to help him and will do so when, through organization, farmers themselves show unanimity and can agree on a method of legislative assistance. "Such organizations as the American Society of Equity and the National Grange have been worth millions to the farmers of this country, and the Wisconsin Cheese Producers' Federation is watched, known and studied from coast to coast," Mr. Schneider said

"No farmer can expect to market his products individually and get a fair share of the profits of his industry," he said.

Robert Amundson, agricultural agent of Outagamie-co presided at the meeting and introduced the speakers.

PROPOSE WIDENING OF STREET CORNER

Steinhauer Suggests That Traffic Island on Cherry-st Be Moved Back

Widening of S. Cherry st at its junction with W. College-ave is proposed as a safety measure by Mike Steinhauer, chairman and the street and bridge committee of the common council.

Mr. Steinhauer's suggestion is that the island in the center of the street be placed back about eight feet and that Cherry st be widened six feet on the east side of the street. on the Wadham service station property.

He calls attention to the fact that since traffic lanes were painted on the street, three months ago. there have been no accidents at the College-ave and Cherry-st intersection. Before the traffic lanes were painted on the brick pavement, an average of one motorist a week would crash into the wigwag signal on W. College-ave or the island on S. Cherry-st, he says

Traffic signal lights at the intersection are unnecessary. Mr. Steinhauer says.

The Chicago and North Western railway made the proposition to the city some time ago that they would pay part of the cost of installation of traffic lights on W. College ave if the city would permit wig wag signals at other railway crossings throughout the city, instead of the gate system.

INTERIM COMMITTEE INSPECTS DAM SITES

Special Hearings Will Be Conducted at Madison Starting Oct. 17

Special hearing before the interim committee of the legislature which inspected the major water power dams in the state and made reports as to the power generated, its cost and use together with the value of properties will be started Oct. 17 at Madison. according to reports from the state capital. The hearings will concern the proposed plan for construction of water power proposed by the last session of the legislature.

The committee, while making its inspection, spent a day in Appleton and along the Wolf river. Power sites visited here were the upper dam and the middle dam, which is now being reconstructed by several of the mills securing water power from it. Other state power projects visited were the Peshtigo dam, the Menominee dam, the Coleman lake dam, the Hot Rapids dam, the Grandfather Falls dam, and the Amherst lake dam

Members of the committee which visited Appleton were Senators Daggett and Barker, Assemblymen Ross and Thayer, and Adolph Kannenberg of the railroad commission.

'Back To Farm' Movement Becoming General In State

A slow noticeable movement 'back to the farm" is reported in Outagamie-co and Wisconsin. Reports from Madison and from the Federal Land bank at St Paul are that because of the unfavorable labor conditions in the cities the back-to-the-farm movement is gaining momentum throughout the state.

Appleton realtors, when questioned about the report, admit that there is some tendency among farmers who sold their farms to go back to farming, but that it is very slow at present. They base their conclusions on the fact that farms are being sold outright rather than exchanged for city property. Rural carriers also report that farms which have been vacant for some time in the northern part of the county now are being operated.

Reports from Oscar Gunderson of the state department of immigration at Madison are based on the number of inquiries from people seeking farm locations and the number of farm land sales reported The Federal Land bank at St Paul recently declared that the impressive thing about Wisconsin is the concensus of opinion that young men who went to the city to earn their way are returning to the farms, "well satisfied that farming, after all, is the best for them"

'It seems to be the belief that unless industrial employment increases materially, the back-to-the-farm movement will be general and its effect permanent." Mr. Gunderson says. "Dealers reporting more transfers than at any time during the past two years declare that farms are going to 'home farm boys' and, further, that there are laboring men who would like to locate on farms but in most cases have no money with which to buy."

BETTER HIGHWAYS THROUGHOUT STATE URGED BY SPEAKER

Hotel Men Told Minimum of 3,000 Miles of Additional Pavement Is Needed

Madison—(AP)—Immediate adoption of a state system of through, hard surfaced roads linking all parts of Wisconsin was urged by A. E. Smith, executive secretary of the Good Roads Association, in an address before the annual convention of the Wisconsin State Hotel Association.

Such a system, he explained, should consist of a minimum of 3,000 additional miles of hard surfaced arterial roads constructed under the most feasible financial plan

The efforts of neighboring states along road construction lines were set out by Mr. Smith as being ample proof of the need for more through highways in Wisconsin

"We begin to realize," he declared, "that we are no longer 'living on the 'main road' but that someone somehow, has built the road around us without the least consideration of our interests or our feelings What this change may mean to Wisconsin's future I leave to your imagination.

SLOW BY COMPARISON

"My personal reaction is that we are not doing justice to ourselves or to the vacation-seeking public if we fail to do our part in a road-building campaign.

"We are all somewhat familiar with the activity of Illinois in its construction of a state system of hard surfaced roads We are becoming acquainted with the wonderful awakening and activity of Iowa in the same field. Minnesota is not neglecting her opportunity.

"It must be admitted that our program is slow by comparison and we have come to the point where our business acumen tells us there is good reason for a change in our program.

"We hear with considerable trepidation that it will soon be possible to travel on a good hard surfaced road from Chicago, or any part of Illinois, through Iowa, and on north on the non-Wisconsin side of the Mississippi river to other playgrounds of the middle west. With an awakening apprehension we learn that full advantage is being taken even now of the changing highways and admit frankly but not cheerfully that tourists from the east, south and southwest will choose to travel on such roads when on long vacation trips.

"The activity of the surrounding states has its application to Wisconsin's position and undoubtedly will serve as an example.

"When we consider that we have been building roads in Wisconsin for 17 years and cannot yet travel across the state on hard surfaced roads in either direction, we are constrained to admit that the Illinois state highway system has its appeal, although we cannot consider their method of financing

MUST ADOPT PLAN

"It seems logical that construction on a state road system should be planned on the main line and feeder method such as is used by a well-mapped railroad system. If this assumption is correct we must adopt such a plan at once, since further development of our county method will soon make the adoption of any state plan politically impossible.

"We seem to be at the parting of the ways. We cannot detour. It is not alone our tourist problem from other states—360,000 in 1926—but our own Wisconsin tourist and business traffic which must be provided for. The cost of poor roads to our citizens is a fabulous sum and we are paying for hard surfaced roads on our trunk system whether we have them or not. We now pay in the rapid depreciation of machines, in wear on tires, in unnecessary breakage and in accidents.

The solution, Mr. Smith declared, lies in the adoption of a state system of hard road for traffic [illegible]

DISTRIBUTE BLANKS FOR NEW LICENSES

Every Motorist Must Have Permission to Drive Before Jan. 1

Madison—(AP)—Applications for automobile driver's license, which every person in the state who drives a car must have after Jan 1, will be distributed soon, according to Arthur Hartman, director of the auto license division. These blanks will be sent to banks, county clerks, police officers, sheriffs and garages, so that they may be easily obtained.

The applicant for license to drive an automobile must inform the secretary of state whether he or she has ever been convicted of reckless driving, driving while intoxicated, or of any other violation of the automobile laws. He must say whether he was responsible for any automobile accidents and whether he has any mental, physical or optical defect which might impair his driving ability. He must also certify that he has read the Wisconsin motor vehicle laws and rules of the road

No charge will be made for license to automobile owners, but those who drive automobiles but do not own one, must pay a fee of 25 cents. The license will be an identification card of cuff color for automobile owners and a green one for drivers who do not own a car.

Any person who drives an automobile without having first obtained a driver's license, after Jan. 1, will be fined not less than $5, or more than $50, or be prisoned in the county jail for not more than 30 days, or be punished by both fine and imprisonment. The operator's license law was enacted by the 1927 legislature, and prohibits persons under 15 years of age from driving cars A person who wishes to learn to drive may do so when accompanied by one who has a license, but must obtain a driver's license as soon as he or she can operate an automobile.

The law does not apply to persons not residents of Wisconsin and such persons may drive automobiles in the state without fear of arrest

A driver's license may be revoked in the person is convicted of driving while intoxicated, or for conviction on a charge of operating a motor vehicle in a manner showing negligence or reckless disregard of human life. If he leaves the scene of accident after having injured any person without giving his name and address to the proper authorities, his license may be revoked. He may also lose his license if he becomes mentally or physically incompetent to operate a car

Bees Settled On Farm So Boy Became Their Keeper

This young man has his hands Full! Herbert Mossholder is the chap that is holding his fate in his hands, so to speak. The 75,000 bees on his hand, chest, and inside his shirt weigh about 15 pounds and are as potent as 15 pounds of dynamite when they are angered.

Mossholder started raising bees three years ago when a swarm stopped on his father's farm two miles north of Appleton on highway 47. The one swarm of three years ago has steadily increased in numbers and with additional purchases of bees, he now has 20 hives.

"I thought there was nothing to bee keeping when I started" Mossholder said, "but I sure was stung."

When this picture was taken, Mossholder first led a few bees from one hive on his arm and the other bees followed. He held them there for over half an hour while a sister drove to town and got a film for camera. At one time when his right arm started to get tired he tried to prop it up with his left hand. He touched his right elbow with his left hand. He also touched a bee. The bee touched his elbow—the way ungentle bees do touch elbows. Thereafter he held the swarm on one arm although it was nearly paralyzied from the weight.

After the picture was taken, he walked over to the hive and placed a few of the bees inside and the others followed.

Of the thousands of bees in this picture, probably not one is alive at the present time, Mossholder says, although the picture was taken only a few days ago. The bees work themselves to death storing honey.

Mossholder estimates that he suffers a 50 per cent loss in bees during the winter due to the inclement weather but the loss is made up when favorable weather returns and the young bees are hatched from the eggs laid by the queen bee.

Young Mossholder is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Mossholder, route 4, Appleton.

STREETS VERY ROUGH AFTER LONG RAINFALL

Condition of unpaved streets in Appleton is "awful," according to Robert Hackworthy, street commissioner. All of the street department's apparatus is working at full speed spiking and grading streets, he said, so that if more rain falls, the streets will not be impassable.

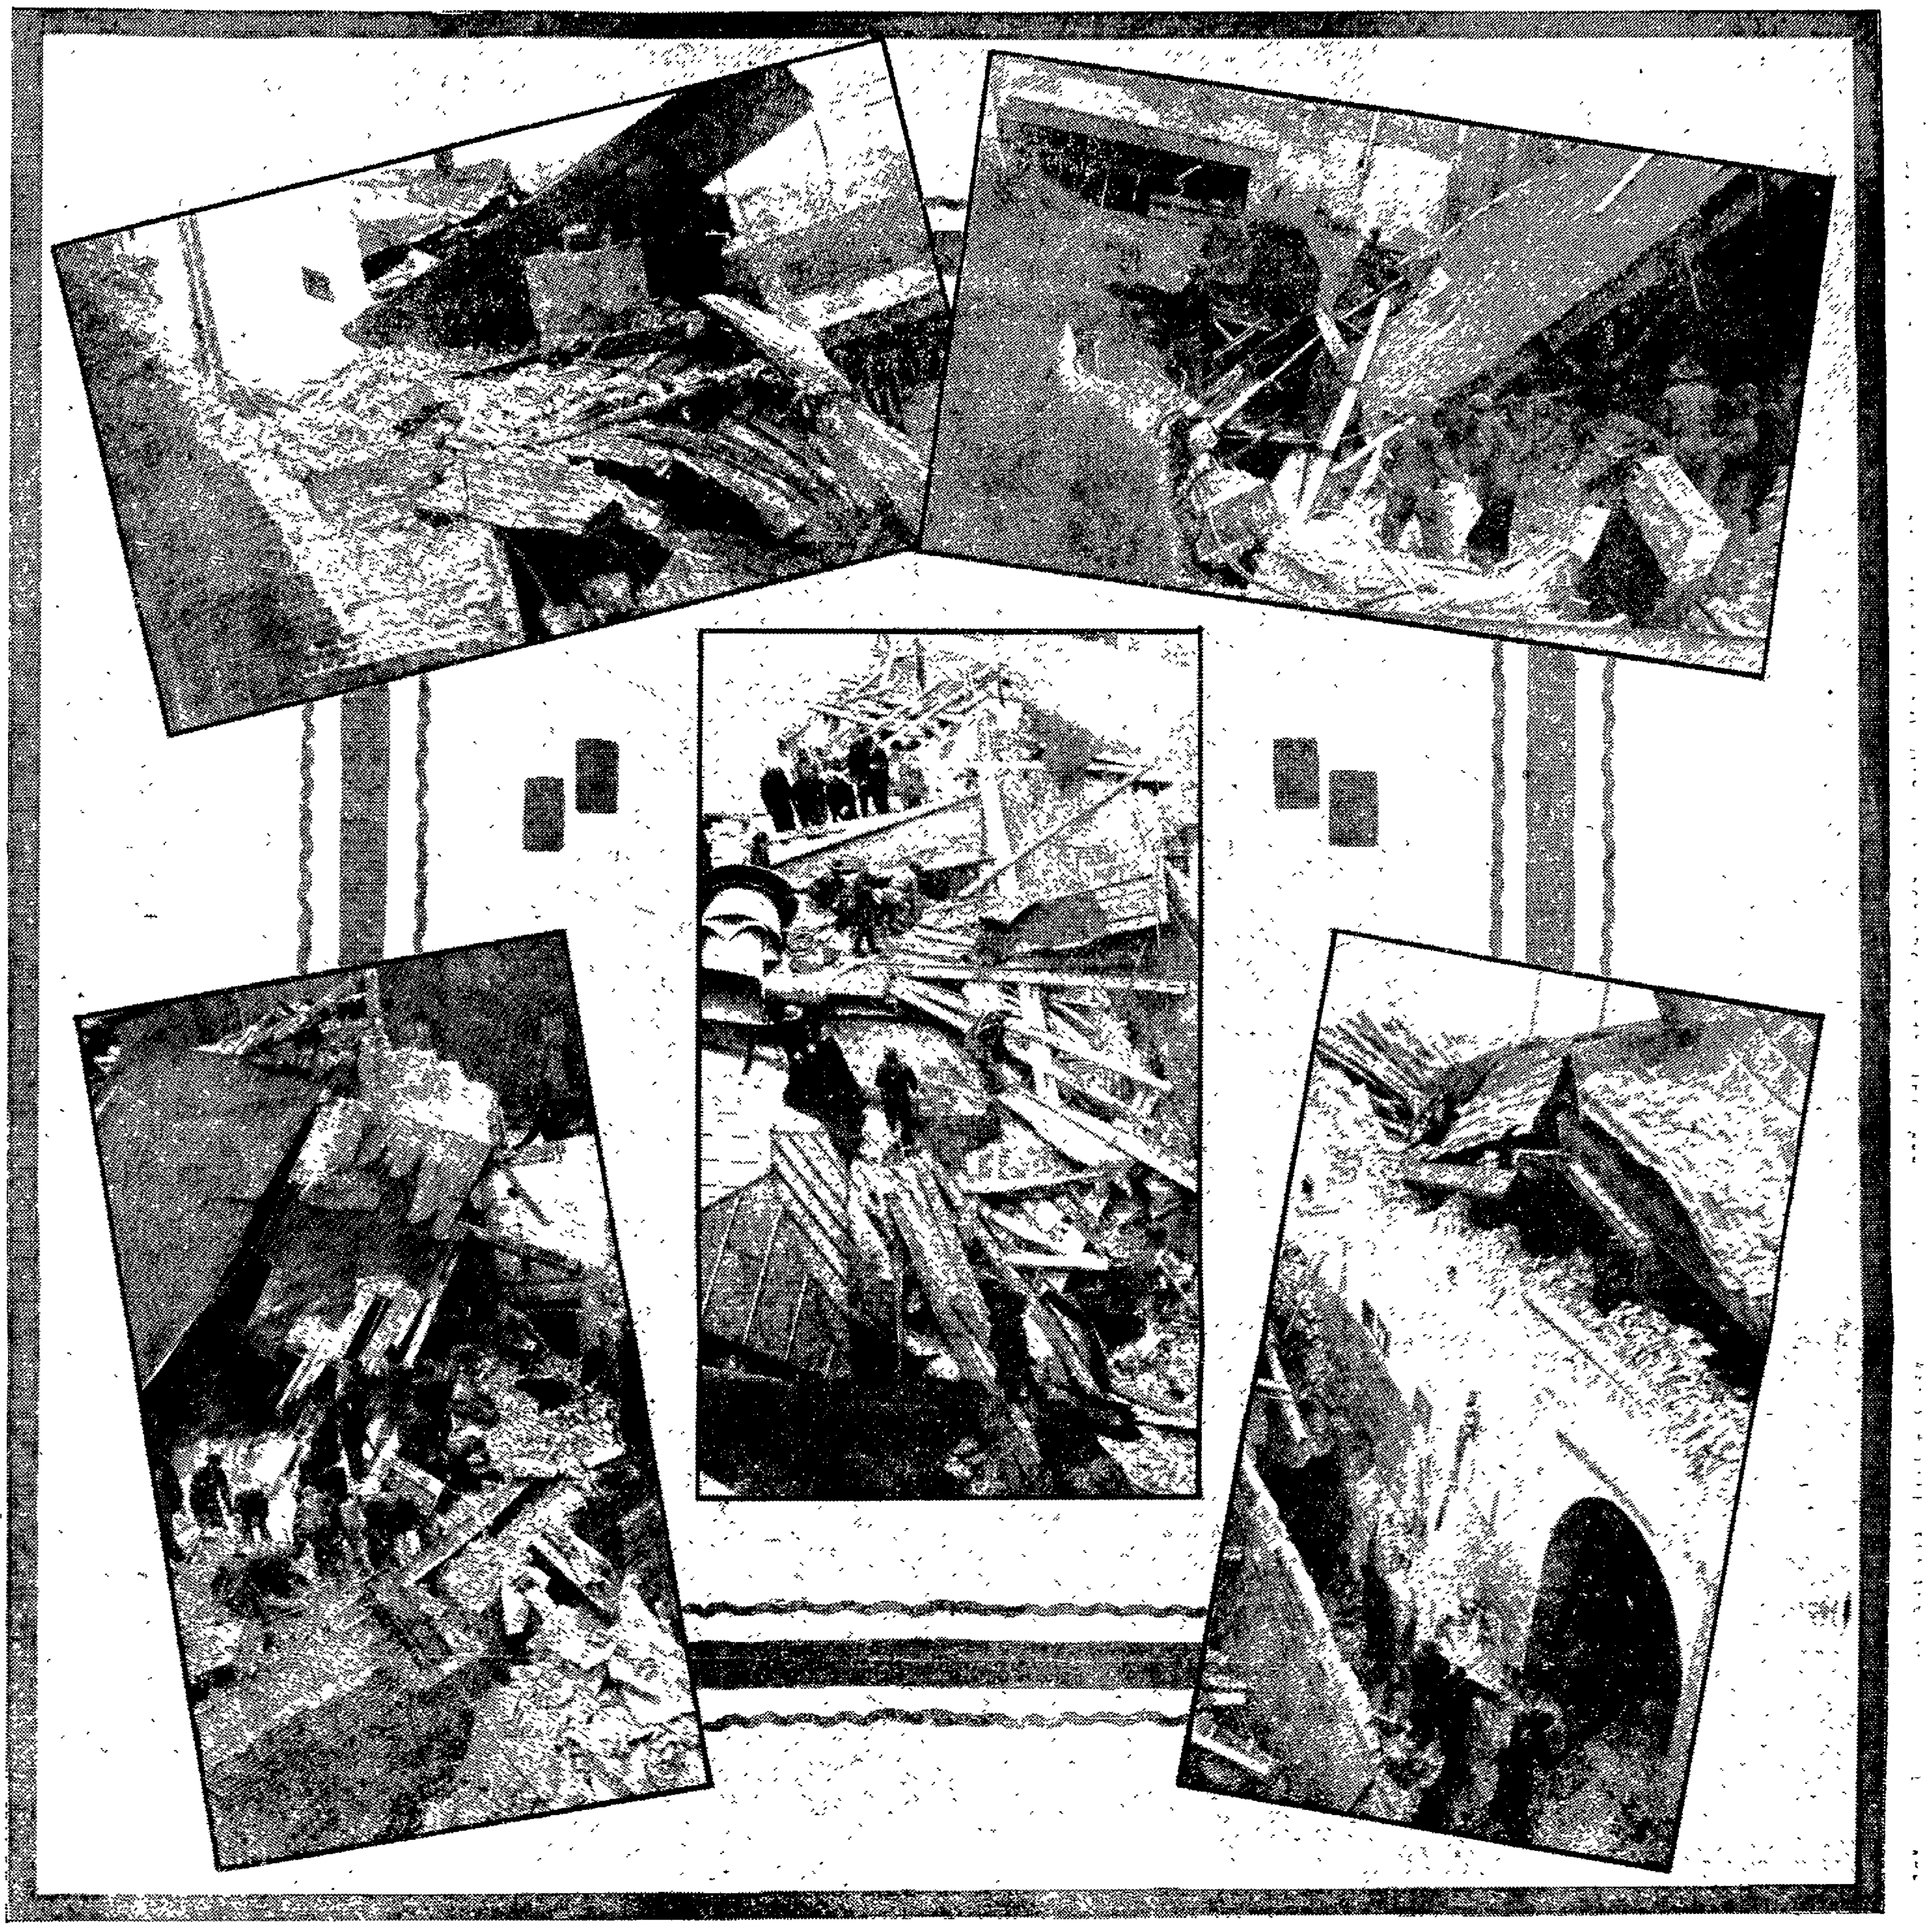
Where More Than A Score Of Men Were Injured And Killed



These pictures of the catastrophe in Kimberly in which at least six men lost their lives and nineteen were injured are the only "close-up" photographs of the wreckage. The pictures were taken from the walls of buildings surrounding the wrecked beater room of the Kimberly-Clark Co. Late this afternoon three men still were unaccounted for and they are believed to be in the wreckage. The bodies of two men, believed to be dead, have been seen in the debris but thus-far rescue crews have been unable to extricate them.

The pictures show the havoc that was created by the collapse of walls and floors of the building. Tons and tons of brick and steel and timber toppled on the 28 men working in the building, burying many of them under many feet of debris. Rescue crews have worked unceasingly day and night since the wreck and have made phenomenal progress in clearing away the debris.

Village Blacksmith Is Too Busy For Golf Or Travel

BY HAMPTON SMITH, JR.

Jersey City, N. J.—Shed no tears, sentimentalists, for the passing of the village smith and smithy.

Anvils will ring right on down into many generations yet to come. Today, mighty-muscled knights of the hammer and forge are to be found round about the country to the number of at least 50,000. Not a one of them is starving; few, if any, find enough spare time due to slackening patronage to take up foreign travel or golf.

These encouraging reports as to the welfare of the iron-thewed gentry come from the annual convention of the Master Horseshoers' and Blacksmiths' Protective Association, just held here.

100 BRAWNY DELEGATES

More than 100 brawny delegates showed up for the unique gathering. They canvassed the outlook for their profession, and uttered not a single complaint.

Take the case of Harry Sirne, of Milton, Pennsylvania. Why, he has been so rushed with work all this year that he scarcely could give any attention at all to his political job as Milton's mayor.

"When motor trucks came," reminisced J. C. Buckley, of Detroit, who was the association's president away back in the 'nineties, "people said, 'there goes the blacksmith.' For a time, I admit, it looked as if the prediction would come true. But industry and commerce now are learning that motor trucks have their uses and Dobbin has his.

"In the last three years many a Dobbin has been called back from the pasture and put into harness again."

Mantled with poetical romance the horseshoeing trade is, of course, what with its leather aprons, puffing bellows, clanging anvils the forge's cheery glow. But in fact as distinguished from fancy, maybe you think the blacksmith's daily regimen is characterized by humdrum and monotony—just one horse after another, as it were.

Wrong again! Horseshoeing business is shot through with zest and high adventure.

"Last year," recounted J. W. Graves, of Zanesville, Ohio, to fellow convention delegates, "one of those western bronchos that Zane Grey writes about was brought into our ship. I was told to fit him out all around. Me and my partner walked up to him. Just as we got within range he had a sudden attack of St. Vitus in both his hind legs.

"Before we can jump away, my buddy gets the animal's hoof prints recorded permanently on his left thigh.

"Finally we had to tie up the beast, but while we were working on him he kicked out of the sling and slung both front feet through our shop window.

"It took us three hours to do the job."

"That reminds me of what happened to McKittrick," chimed in a local delegate. "William McKittrick, you know—got a shop right here in Jersey City.

"Well, one day it was raining and storming like forty. Mac was working at his anvil, hammering a shoe. A bolt of lightning flashed through his shop, knocked Mac's anvil off the block and Mac's tongs from his hand, and kicked Mac himself right out of the door. After that Mac always closed up when a storm was brewing."

ELKS HERE TO VOTE ON JUNIOR LODGE PLAN

Purpose of Junior Lodge is to Legalize Work Among Boys

Members of the Appleton lodge of the Elk Club will vote on a plan for the organization of a junior order of the lodge at their first regular meeting Wednesday evening, Oct. 12. Every lodge in the country is to discuss the matter at the first regular meeting and reports will be forwarded back to Elk headquarters. Officials of the Appleton lodge when approached on the matter said they knew very little about the plan other than that it was to be voted on at the next meeting.

The last issue of the Elk magazine in speaking of the proposed lodge said.

"A two fold purpose is expected to be accomplished by the adoption of the amendment providing for the junior organization. First, to legally authorize the performance of a definite service among boys in a manner not now permitted. Second, to provide an effective method of training young men for membership in the order under conditions that will naturally lead them to seek that membership when they become of age.

"Those of us who recall the days when there was no such organization as the boy scouts, realize what a need in boy life that organization fills. Because of this, Elks have felt a keen interest in that movement and have aided and encouraged it in every way.

"But there is no organization of national scope that is seeking to continue the training in useful citizenship of boys who have passed the boy scout age, although the need for such training would seem to be obvious. And the proposed amendment looks to the undertaking of that service by the Elks through such of the subordinate lodges as may elect to engage in that particular activity.

"It is not wholly an untried experiment. A number of the lodges have for several years quite successfully fathered such junior organizations as independent units having no connection with the order as such. And it is thought that the proposed sanction of their activities bringing them under the control of the grand lodge, will prove a stimulus to the movement.

MEXICAN POLITICS

Washington dispatches say that the administration is disturbed over the uprising in Mexico. Worry over what takes place politically in Mexico by either the government or our people is both superfluous and needless. We have to take things as they come down there. Whether we would prefer the Calles-Obregon administration or one by the late lamented Serrano, or by General Gomez. we could only hazard a guess. The assassinations, executions, or whatever one may term them, of generals, candidates for president and legislators, are deplorable, but we know from past experience that this is the way Mexico prefers to settle its elections. President Wilson tried to force reform in Mexican politics by refusing to recognize Huerta when the latter ascended to the presidential chair via the rifle. He was not conspicuously successful. We may lay down the general rule that we will not recognize governments resting on violence or assassination, but in practice we have to waive it.

It is not necessary to speculate upon the causes of the present disturbances. The probability is that they do not go deeper than the personal rivalries of politicians and "generals," and of the latter Mexico already suffers a superabundance. It is not for us to say which conspiracy shall succeed or which shall fail, nor is it a matter for grave concern. If we can rely upon the messages sent out from Mexico City, more people are supporting the Calles-Obregon combination than its assailants. Labor is said to be a unit for it. However, we cannot fully rely upon the news sources at such a time, as the government may send out colored information.

We think most Americans will be disposed to let the Mexicans fight out their difficulties without interference or sympathy. The prospect of securing anything like a stable government with a continuity of policy appears to be so remote that it does not matter greatly what happens. Any turn of events will probably be bad, particularly in the relations of Mexico with the United States.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS BACK ON THE JOB

Lamentable as it may seem, it is an admitted fact that the Sunday school has something in common with the more worldly affairs of commerce, in that it does not do much "business" during the hot weather months. So it is that the Bible schools now find attendance and interest increasing after getting along for several months without much of either.

Summer attendance never was as large and regular as that from late fall to early spring, but in recent years, for a number of reasons, the disparity has been increasingly pronounced. Chief among the causes is the automobile. Hundreds of thousands of adults and children, once constant members of Sunday school classes, now utilize summer Sundays for motor jaunts. Vacations are another enemy of summer attendance, each weekend finding a new batch of members "out of town."

While some will contend the attendance in the primary and junior departments slumps sadly in the hot weather months because of the so-much-talked-of waning power of parental authority, it is likely that this is less true than that modern parents who lose interest in Sunday school on the first hot Sunday in the spring are too consistent to "drive" their progeny reluctantly into the churches.

However, for the present, these conditions and problems have ceased to be troublesome. That vast army of self-sacrificing volunteers who take upon themselves the burden of the religious education of millions of young and old Americans is back at the post filled with new inspiration and energy and the flock which temporarily strayed, is slowly wandering back into the fold, there to remain contentedly until the siren call of nature sounds again next spring. It seems that the Sunday schools are given but a part of the year in which to do their good work.

KICKS AND KICKERS

A recently published dictionary boasts of having 400,000 words between A and Z of its alphabetical order. A tremendous number of words, indeed, each word possibly in use day in and day out and each word enjoying the acquaintanceship of some companionable human. But how many of these 400,000 words are universally or anywhere near universally known? An astonishing few in these enlightened United States, but if no other there is one that can truthfully lay claim to universality.

It is the word "kicks," a diminutive word, indeed. Of four letters by actual count unless in the prevalent plural. Like most English words, its use and definitions are many and diversified but its universality extends to only one of these, i. e., to "object strenuously, to raise a howl, to complain, protest and vociferate against," and so on ad infinitum.

In other and fewer words "kicking" is about the only thing humanity is unanimous in. Every last animal vocally equipped to distinguish itself from other animals by the word "dumb" is inoculated with some pet kick or a dozen of them, more probably. Everybody, barring dead ones, is kicking in slumber, before, and after and during each meal, while at play and while shirking more useful and fruitful work. In other words, the United States has to go to the "kickers" and their ubiquitous "kicks." (Note the prevalent plural.)

The divine pessimist, Arthur Schopenhauer, once said that optimism is the last stage of insanity, but it has never been found where he ever said or wrote that it is the bounden duty of every pessimist (kicker) to proclaim his pessimism (kicks) in the world.

The illimitable kicks forbid enumeration or classification but picked at random a few of the most fashionable and popular are these of capital against the shackles of labor and of labor against the slavery and iron heel of capital, of the landlord against the food profiteer and tax-burdening public official and of the landlord's tenant against the rent profiteer, of the reformers and calamity howlers against licentiousness, immorality and new thought and of the wine-weaned and "rail-birds" against the reformers, the prohibitionists, the shalt-notters in general, of the political party out of power against the malfeasance and incompetence of the party in power. Kicks are one thing found without seeking.

Humble and abject apologies for this "kick" against the "kickers."

OUR CHANGING DIET

Railway shipments of the 16 principal fruits and vegetables, highly perishable foods, between 1924 and 1926 averaged annually 848,099 carloads, an increase of 77 per cent during the last ten years.

That period represented a 440 per cent increase in the quantity of lettuce consumed, and a 216 per cent increase for grapes.

In 1926 the 1400 cold storage warehouses listed by the Department of Agriculture had a combined capacity of 585,000,000 cubic feet and they handled 1,000,000 carloads of refrigerator freight.

Since 1910 ice cream consumption has increased from 1.04 gallons per capita to 2.80, aggregating an annual total of 42,200,000,000 gallons.

To meet this new bill of fare, use of ice in the United States has more than doubled in the last ten years, the consumption per capita in 1917 having been 480 pounds, and in 1926, 1040 pounds.

The American menu appears to be changing more and more to fresh fruits, vegetables and dairy products, rather than the heavy starchy foods which formerly made up the bill of fare. The change of much of the national population from physical to mental labor, from physical to nervous activity, is credited with bringing this about.

OLD MASTERS

A Land of Dreams and Sleep—a poppied land!
With skies of endless calm above her head.
The drowsy warmth of summer noonday shed
Upon her hills and silence stern and grand
Throughout her Desert's temple-burying sand.
Before her threshold, in their ancient place,
With closed lips, and fixed, majestic face,
Noteless of Time, her dumb Colossi stand,
Oh, pass them not with light, irreverent tread;
Respect the dream that builds her fallen throne,
And soothes her to oblivion of her woe.
Hush! for she does but sleep; she is not dead:
Action and Toil have made the world their own,
But she hath built an altar to Repose.

Health Talks

Noted Physician And Author

Dr. Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. Writer's names are never printed. Only inquiries of general interest are answered in this column, but all letters will be answered by mail if written in ink and a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Requests for diagnosis or treatment of individual cases cannot be considered. Address Dr. William Brady, in care of this paper.

THE SAD INHERITANCE

Dr. John H. Stokes, in his fine book, "The Third Great Plague," (Saunders Co., Philadelphia) says that statistics based on over 100,000 cases, show that about one child in every 148 from 2 to 12 years of age has hereditary syphilis. Referring to the fatal effect of the disease upon the unborn child and the fact that 75 per cent of syphilitic children born alive die within a year, Dr. Stokes remarks: The toll of syphilis in misery, in desolation, in heart breakings, in broken bonds and defeated ideals, can never be estimated in numbers or in words."

Hereditary syphilis is not the vague state we formerly conceived. It is the same disease as ordinary acquired syphilis, but some of the outward manifestations are less characteristic that the signs of ordinary syphilis. Hereditary syphilis is congenital—that is, the disease is present in the child's body at birth. It is contracted from the mother, who in turn, has been infected with the disease by the syphilitic father, as a rule. There is no ground for the assumption that syphilis is ever carried on to the third generation. Indeed, it is doubtful if there ever is a third generation in the syphilitic line. If a child has congenital (hereditary) syphilis and survives to adult age, the chances are that he or she will be sterile. Before the introduction of the Wasserman blood test the frequent observation that a healthy appearing mother bore a syphilitic child led physicians into considerable wrong conjecture; this biological test has shown that such a mother, though apparently healthy, nevertheless has the disease in a latent form.

The Wasserman test is quite fallible and in itself means little. Laymen sometimes make grave mistakes by pinning absolute faith to such a test or by taking the test as a guide, instead of the opinion and advice of the physician. If I had syphilis I wouldn't give a nickel for the number of crosses such a test might indicate—I'd leave all that for my doctor to worry about.

Dr. Abernethy B. Cannon, in a study of 202 cases of congenital syphilis, found that the syphilitic infection had existed in the mothers less than five years in 104 cases and longer than five years in 64 cases. The patients' ages varied from three weeks to 44 years, the average age at which symptoms developed being between 10 and 15 years. (Interesting to interpolate here the observation that this corresponds with the age when incipient tuberculosis is likely to occur.)

It seems unfair to atempt to describe the signs or manifestations of congenital or hereditary syphilis. Already half informed laymen draw too many hasty conclusions and cause too much pain to innocent people with their snap diagnoses. Nine times out of 10 the actual disease goes undetected by these half baked lay diagnosticians. Ninety-one per cent of Dr. Cannon's cases were normal mentally, and fully 90 per cent of them presented no deformity which a layman would notice. The manifestations of the disease were revealed rather by the medical examination. So that would place the so called social worker who just dotes on discovering cases of syphilis on a plane with Mrs. Gamp and Mrs. Grundy.

Congenital (inherited) syphilis is as amenable to medical treatment as is acquired syphilis. The disease may be arrested by proper treatment if this is given early and continued until the physician is sure the disease is arrested.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Believe It or Not

Some time ago I wrote you about my boy 5 years old wetting the bed. Your advice was very good and he got all over that. Now perhaps you can help me again. This same boy is rather a nervous child. His feet perspire all the time. Is there any relief for that? (Mrs. E. W.)

Answer—I must steel myself to withstand the shock for some day somebody is going to write and tell me that my advice on the prevention of seasickness worked like a charm. Let the boy go barefoot every day until cold weather. When he wears shoes and stockings sprinkle borated talcum powder freely inside the stockings and inside the shoes.

We Are Great on Bugs

We found your suggestion for using sodium flouride so effective in ridding our house of cockroaches, that I have decided to ask whether you can suggest anything equally effective for bedbugs? (K. D. J.)

Answer—Send a stamped addressed envelope for instructions for eradicating undesirable company. Are there any other bugs in need of our attention?

Sweating Hands

Please publish again the formula for sweating hands. (R. D.)

HASKIN WRITES TODAY ON—

FEDERAL AND STATE TAXES

Washington, D. C. — Between 1921 and 1926 State taxes increased 61 per cent and local taxes 30 per cent, while Federal taxes decreased 30 per cent. Translated into money terms this means that while Federal taxes were reduced from 4,905 millions in 1921 to 3,417 millions in 1926, a reduction of 1,498 millions, State and local taxes increased from 3,933 millions to 5,348 millions, an increase of 1,415 millions.

Such is the answer of the Treasury Department to the complaint that taxes have been getting higher and higher until the burden is almost more than can be borne. It is an admonition to the taxpayer to do his complaining where it may do him some good—in his home community and State. Uncle Sam has been easing off the burden, but all he does in that direction is offset by the increased cost of State and local governments.

What the tax burden amounts to individually is also explained. Federal taxes were $27.17 per capita, or $76.61 per person gainfully employed, in 1926, as compared with $42.23 per capita, or $120.16 per person gainfully employed in 1921. State and local taxes were $45.66 per capita, or $119.92 per person gainfully employed, in 1926, as compared with $36.27 per capita, or $96.35 per person gainfully employed in 1921.

As Ogden L. Mills, Undersecretary of the Treasury, told the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia, Federal taxes, generally speaking, are fairly well divided between direct and indirect, and give recognition to the principle of ability to pay. State and local tax systems, on the other hand, are inequitable, unscientific and fail to a very large extent on one form of property—over 80 per cent of the $4,084,000,000 of local taxes rest on real property—and disregard to a very great extent the ability of different classes of taxpayers to contribute to the support of government.

As a result of economy in Washington, said Mr. Mills, the rates of a fairly well devised and reasonably scientific tax system are coming down, while those of an unbalanced and unfair State and local systems are rising, thus increasing existing inequalities and injustices.

EXPENDITURES ANOTHER PROBLEM

But the increase in his taxes is not the only thing to worry the citizen. Public expenditures are by no means limited by tax receipts and that is a phase of the problem to which he may well direct his attention. The individual who persistently spends more than his income may be said to be headed toward bankruptcy. Governments, as a rule do that very thing, spending more than their current revenues, and they escape bankruptcy because there is seemingly no limit to the public debt that may be piled up.

In 1925 total expenditures by Federal, State, and local governments amounted to $11,242,000,000. Local governments were responsible for 51.9 per cent of the total expenditures, but raised only 47.4 per cent of total taxes; State government were responsible for 14.4 per cent of total expenditures, but raised 13.7 per cent of taxes; the Federal Government was responsible for slightly more than 33.8 per cent of all public expenditures and raised 38.9 per cent of all taxes.

So it is that Uncle Sam is able to pay off his indebtedness, while the State and municipalities are not only spending all their tax revenues, but are issuing bonds with seeming disregard of the ultimate consequences of that sort of thing. From 1913 to June last, the net indebtness of State and local governments increased from $3,364,000,000 to $11,703,000,000. In sharp contrast with that, the national debt was cut from $25,482,000,000 to $18,512,000,000 between june 30, 1919, and June 3, 1927, according to Treasury Department figures.

New York State is cited by Mr. Mills as one of the worst offenders. For it the combined States and local debt has been increased from $986,120,090 in 1913—the amounts in sinking funds being deducted so as to give a net figure— to $1,734,193,090 in 1925, or from $103.43 per capita to $155.36 per capita.

Analyzing the gross expenditures of State and local governments it is seen that in 1925, out of a total of 7,343 million dollars, 29 per cent was spent for education, 20 per cent for highways, 12.5 per cent for social welfare, 11.6 per cet for debt reduction and interest, 9.7 per cent for the protection of persons and property, 6.8 per cent for public service enterprises, and 6.5 per cent for overhead.

GETTING OUR MONEY'S WORTH

"While the mere size of these expenditures does not of itself constitute a reason for criticism," said Mr. Mills, "when there is reason to believe that extravagance and waste exist, to plead the worthiness of the objects, as is frequently done, is utterly beside the point. No one will deny that we must have highways and an adequate educational system, but whether in both of these fields we are getting a full return on the money spent is the question that remains unanswered today.

"The real problem, as I see it, is not so much whether we should increase or decrease our governmental activities, but whether we could not get what we are getting to-day from government for a good deal less than we are paying. That is a very live and real question."

Illustrating the consequences of issuing bonds to pay for public improvements instead of adhering to the pay-as-you-go principle, Mr. Mills said that a State or city financing $10,000,000 of public improvements annually by the issue of 25-year 4 per cent bonds at the end of the fourteenth year would be paying out in debt service $320,000 more than it realized from the current bond issue. That is, it would take in $10,000,000 from the sale of the bonds and pay out $10,320,000 in debt service. In the twenty-fifth year the debt service will have grown to $15,200,000 or $5,200,000 more than the cost of financing from current revenues. At the end of that year the State will have received $250,000,000; it will have paid out in debt service $218,000; and it will have $120,000,000 in bonds outstanding that will cost $161,600,000 before they are retired.

Q. What progress has the United States made in commercial aviation during the past year? A. A. B.

A. A recent announcement says: "Without subsidy, without any encouragement save the expectation of government aids to navigation and with the government-operated transcontinental air mail route as a backbone, in one year there has developed in America an airway system more than a third as big as the eight-year old air net of Europe. In less than an average of six month's operation in its entirely the approximate airplane mileage on these airways (4,428,772 for 1926) was more than half that of all Europe. Thirty-four hundred paying passengers and 1,733,090 pounds of freight were carried. Nearly seven million miles is the airplane travel estimate for 1927 on the present contracts, and new routes are scheduled for early operation."

Q. Why do all the jewelers' clock sign point to the hour of "18 minutes past eight"? I have noted this all over the country with but one exception. Some one told me that it was the hour that Lincoln was shot or died. E. P. McD.

A. The position of the hands of a clock is one which has been selected for the reason that it furnishes the greatest facility to meet the requirement for painting the longer name above the hands and the shorter below. The minute hand has been varied hand has been varied in position from 17 to 25 minutes after eight. Sometimes the longer name requires to be written in a semicircle above the hands. There have been stories connected with the death of Lincoln, that the position of the hands is commemorative of the hour of the death, but this story can be shown to be false from the simple fact that the hour of the death of Lincoln was not at 8:22 o'clock. Further, the use of this position of the hands of the clock is believed to have preceded Lincoln's death.

Q. Where are the highest smokestacks in the world? I. S.

A. The highest is the smokestack of the smelter at Tacoma, Washington (572 feet high); the second highest at Anaconda, Montana; and the third hightest in Japan belonging to the smelter plant at Saganoseki.

Q. How much toll has been received from vessels going through the Panama Canal? J. A. T.

A. The Panama Canal was opened to commercial traffic August 15, 1914, and from the date of opening to the close of business, June 30, 1926, transits of commercial toll-paying vessels of 20 tons net measurement or over numbered 34,902 on which a total of $142,134,397.95 in tolls were paid.

Q. I am experimenting on an invention of mine which necessitates the use of wooden blocks for floats and would like to have you inform me which kind of wood would be preferable for me to use.

A. There are anumber of species of wood which would meet your requirements fairly satisfactory. Cork (obtained from the bark of trees), Balsa, a number of firs, western red cedar, and northern white cedar would all appear to be adapted. We presume you are familiar with the use of cork for floats, life preservers, etc. Balsa wood is also used rather extensively for this class of material. Among our native species corck bark fri and northern white cedar are about the lightest woods available. The fir is very difficult to penetrate with water and we would therefore expect that it would be extremely slow in water logging.

Q. Is it true that rattlesnakes are blind during dog days? A. B. B.

A. The milky appearance of the eyes of a snake shortly before the slough is cast is due to the separation of the outer layer of epidermis from the cornea, resulting in impaired vision. This gives rise to various superstitions regarding snakes going blind during the dog days of late summer.

Q. What is tin plate? E. L.

A. The Bureau of Standards says that tin plate as the term is used commercially, refers to sheet steel or iron which has been coated with a thin layer of tin.

Q. I should like to know what will remove lacquer from the surface of some silver loving cups. A. L.

A. Lacquer may be removed from the surface of silver loving cups by using warm lye.

Q. Are monocles ever worn as their than ornaments? M. E. H.

A. The purpose of the monocle is to serve as an eyeglass for one eye. Its main object therefore is not to serve as an ornament, although some persons do affect them in this way.

Q. Were sundaes ever known by any other name? A. F.

A. Sundaes at one time spelled Sundays, were sometimes called Friday's when they were first introduced.

Q. What are the various titles of the King of England? L. D. S.

A. The title of the King of England is "By the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India." It was recently stated that the English status of the British dominions necessitated a change in the title of the King. So far as we know, however, no official action has as yet been taken.

Q. How long does it take the various vegetables to mature? R. C.

A. According to a publication issued by the Department of Agriculture, it requires from 60 to 80 days for beets to mature, from 70-100 for carrots; 20-140 for radishes; 125-160 for parsnips; 130-150 for onions grown from seed and 60-120 for onions grown from sets; 100-140 for peppers; 80-125 for tomatoes; 60-90 for lettuce; 40-80 for peas; 100-120 for watermelon and 120150 for celery.

Q. What is the correct pronunciation of the name Joan, and its derivation? I. W. F.

A. Joan is the feminine of John and means "Grace of the Lord." The correct pronunciation of the name Joan is Jon.

Q. Kindly explain the difference between hotels operating on the European plan and those employing the American plan. E. M. W.

A. A hotel which operates on the European plan charges merely a tariff for the room which is occupied by the guest. The charges made by a hotel operated on the American plan include three meals a day.

Q. What is the Fifth Estate? A. R.

A. Quoting from the American Journal of Pharmacy, November, 1925 — "The Fifth Estate is composed of those having the simplicity to wonder, the ability to question, the power to generalize, the capacity to apply. It is, in short, the company of thinkers, workers, expounders, and practitioners upon which the world is absolutely dependent for the preservation and advancement of that organized knowledge which we call Science. It is their seeing eye that discloses, as Carlyle said, 'the inner harmony of things; what Nature meant.' It is they who bring the power and the fruits of knowledge to the multitude who are content to go through life without thinking and without questioning, who accept fire and the hatching of an egg, the attraction of a feather by a bit of amber, and the stars in their courses, as a fish accepts the ocean."

Q. Where is mercury found? L. F. W.

A. In the United States mercury is found in the coast ranges of California and Texas. Other deposits are in Spain, Tuscany, Italy, Idria, Austria, and Mexico. The chief sources of production of mercury are Italy and Spain. Of a total annual production of about 3300 metric tons, Italy provides about 1600 tons and Spain 1000 tons. The production of the United States during the past six years has been about 300 metric tons per year.

A NEW YORKER IN PARIS

By Gilbert Swan

Paris, France—So I started out to see Paris . . . And since it was lunch time, Milnott Saunders steered me to a place which, he assured me, was among the very newest, having been open for but a few weeks.

"You will be particularly interested," he went on, "in the very modernistic decoration of the place . . the newest French school of design . . ." .. ....

It was even as he had said, with those elaborately ornate French baskets and table decorations greeting the eyes as I entered the ivory-tinted hallway. . . . Just beyond the door stood the blond and smilingly affable proprietor. And as he bowed me in, it seemed to me that his face was just a bit familiar.

"What is the proprietor's name?" I inquired. "Is it by any chance Bob Card?"

The last time I saw Bob Card he was a manager or something at the Bohemian Club, San Francisco . . . And, unless my memory fails me he had come from Grand Rapids, Mich. ..

So I started out again to see Paris. And as we left Bob's cafe and swung over toward the Madeline, stopping to peer into a bar or two, a strapping young man signaled us from the sidewalk. He was well acquainted with my friend and guide and cordially invited us over to the Montmarte on Thursday night.

"He's opening one of the Franchiest nightlife resorts and we should be there by all means," my friend said as we walked away. "He has operated a number of places, but this new one will be the biggest."

"Yes," I said, "but there's something very familiar about his face. I've seen it somewhere. . . . .

"Quite probably . . ." my friend replied. . . . "He was quite famous in America for his connection with athletics . . . halfback, I believe, at the University of Illinois. . . . name's Jed Kiley, if I remember."

And so I started out to see Paris . .

We wandered along the Seine watching the miles of fishermen, idling their lines in the sluggish water. . . . The miles of little bookstalls along the sidewalk and the picturesque street merchants.

And, as it grew dark, my friend began to tell me of a romantic little street over on the Left Bank . . .

"The Rue Jacob, over by the Bonaparte,' 'he began. "I'll show you the place where Voltaire used to go walking; where his sweetheart lived and all that. And Victor Hugo was near by. And there's a very nice little restaurant there. You can look out the window and see many of these places." So we went to the "Elza." .

But why go on . . . when we got there who should be running the little restaurant but Elsa Wiltsie, at whose resort in Sausalito, California—just across the bay from San Francisco—I lived for many a month.

And so I went home.

Tomorrow I'm going out to see Paris. . . . And if I meet another Californian disguised as a French restaurant, I'm going to commit murder.

DAILY HINTS FOR HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

An investigation made by the United States Public Health Service revealed the fact that lead dust is to be found regularly in the air of many industrial establishments.

In cracker factories, underwear factories, machine shops, groceries, cigar factories, tailoring and pressing shops, and even in an ice cream plant some lead was found in the dust in the air. Lead pipe still is in use in most of the larger cities, particularly for connections.

When lead is absorbed into the human body changes take place in the tissues of the nervous system and also in the blood. Investigations were made to find out to what extent the absorption of lead would affect the human body when it existed in amounts hardly sufficient to produce poisoning but still sufficient to produce changes in the blood.

PREVENTING ABSORPTION

Small degrees of lead absorption are not important, but when the blood cells are affected in considerable numbers, some means must be taken to prevent further absorption of this poison.

Two prominent physicians investigated the amount of lead poisoning in a southern enameling plant in Nashville, Tenn. Thirty-nine men were examined and a high degree of lead poisoning was found in 15 cases.

Only 13 of the 39 men examined failed to show evidence of lead absorption. One of the men affected was a packer, four were enamel painters and five were sprayers, one was an inspector, one a furnace man, one a foreman, one was a grainer and one was a mixer.

Thus the lead apparently affected the men in all parts of the works without reference to the amount of contact with lead, but apparently with relationship to the attention that they paid to their personal hygiene.

Twenty-six of the men said that they smoked while at work. Most of them were careless about washing their hands before eating. Indeed, many of them ate in the room where they had been working, thus exposing their food to lead dust.

The washroom itself was dark and poorly ventilated, and there were no shower baths so that the traces of dust could not be removed before the men left for home.

TAKING PRECAUTIONS

When proper sanitary arrangements were made and the men were cautioned about chewing tobacco at work, when a suitable exhaust system was supplied for carrying off the dust, and when a system of supervision was installed so that men affected by the poison might be properly advised, the conditions were overcome.

Out of the 39 men in the plant concerned, not one could be given an absolutely clean bill of health. Many of them suffered with physical defects in addition to the disturbance brought about by the lead poisoning. Sanitary control of industries is one of the most important steps in the modern most important steps in the medicine.

It's six of one and half a dozen of the other.

They Also Serve

by Peter B. Kyne

REVIEW BY ELEANOR WING

Another war story—but it isn't like all the rest of gruesome tales of blood and thunder which tired out the American public, and all the other publics directly following the world war. THEY ALSO SERVE, by Peter B. Kyne, published recently by Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, is the story of two horses—or rather of one horse who repeats his horse observations of the war to an Irish hunter and a Welsh pony. These three individuals—for one has a hard task before the story has progressed very far, in remembering that these three are horses and not people, have settled down after the tremendous upheaval of war in a pleasant country home, and there is little to do with their day except to spend them reminiscing.

The Professor who tells the story is a dignified [illegible] horse, and narrates with style and conviction, but he is hard put to it to keep his superior place with O'Malley, the Irishman whose sense of humor threatens the tale every little while. With typical scorn, he treats Taffy, the pony, as every Irish has always treated a Welshman saying with "unnecessary asperity that everybody knew the Welsh for an undistinguished race." But he usually begs the Professor's pardon politely after these interruptions, and because of his well known Irish temper, gets off scot-free.

The story of THEY ALSO SERVE is not very unusual. But Kyne's style of telling it certainly is. The vitality and racy humor are at their height in this equine commentary upon the army which is also a love story as sensed by the one witness whose presence never puts constraint upon the lover's ardor. The Professor went into the Service before the draft yet without volunteering. He is only a cowboy's horse at the beginning of the story, sent to serve in France with the artillery, but he carries many a major and general upon his back before the war is over.

The episodes are far more important than the plot as a whole, as they should be in an autobiography. The kinks of human nature are noticed carefully by the professor—the rough, brave nature of Sergeant Regan, his marriage to a French girl whose language he couldn't speak; the hot temper of Private Givens, and his gallantry as well—the Commanding Officer—unique in the army because of her feminine gender; the ups and downs of living, depending upon the mood of the captains and majors—all this the Professor tells impressively. Perhaps the best story of all is told of the passage to France. The ship is sunk by a submarine, and horses and men swim the two miles to the French coast. Private Givens, who has again lost his temper, sees a dark spot on the water, and shoots. He is later cited for bravery, for killing a German submarine commander whom he doesn't know he has killed. Improbable, perhaps—but many astounding things happened during the war, and this may be one of the many which never have been told.

THEY ALSO SERVE ought to be a very papular novel. It is a very easy book to read, and its theme is no longer repugnant to readers. The man who went to war will find many a smile and a sigh on its pages; the boy who wanted to go and the women who stayed at home will be thrilled and interested. Of course, the book is by no means a classic, and will not last beyond this generation—but most novels nowadays are like that. They serve the same purpose as movies—giving an evening of enjoyment without much idea of stimulating either intellect or memory. But perhaps THEY ALSO SERVE will do a good turn by bringing back some of the pleasanter, more humorous, gentler aspects of war which was neither pleasant nor gentle.

$3,182 IN FINES PAID TO TREASURER

A total of $3,182.60 was paid Fred E. Bachman, city treasurer, for fines collected from persons arrested by members of the Appleton police department since Jan. 1 1927 according to figures compiled by George T. Prim chief of police. In 1926, according to Chief Prim, the city received approximately $500 for fines during the entire year. The reason for the big increase this year is that the city council has adopted ordinances similar to the state laws, and instead of booking offenders on a state charge, as was done in 1926, they are now charged with violating a city ordinance and the city treasury benefits. Following is a list of the amounts collected each month since the beginning of the year:

January, $83; February, $37; March, $42; April, $227.60; May, $395; June, $971; July, $492; August, $420; September, $513.

Van Loon In Vivid Story Of America

"America" (Boni and Liveright) by Henrik Van Loon is not the conventional type of history—far from it.

It is told in Van Loon's singularly clear and forceful style, with a mellowness and charm. Van Loon can put the breath of life into history. "Democracy," says he, "depends much more than any other form of government for its continued success upon the application of an elaborate system of flattery."

You may not agree with all his statements, but you will not be bored by them. And the drawings, by the author, are a delight.

Another book that purports to separate illusion from fact is "Patriots off their Pedestals," by Paul Wilstach (Bobbs Merrill). Here are intimate sketches of Washington, Franklin, Patrick Henry, Alexander Hamilton, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, John Marshall and James Madison. However, the pedestals are not entirely discarded. Wilstach merely stresses the personality rather than the pedestal.

"Reminiscences of Adventures and Service" (Scribners) by Maj. Gen. A. W. Greely is a record of 83 years of achievement.

This man, who earned his first money weeding onions at one cent a row and was an army corporal at 17, had little schooling but became a scholar and a scientist as well as a soldier of the finest quality.

He made an intensive study of meteorology and remains an authority on the subject.

He was a teacher of geography for three years in George Washington university.

It's an intensely human narrative, with high lights of adventure such as Indian fighting experiences away back yonder.

"The Queen,' said Tony, in a matter of fact voice. There was a stir over the crowded gardens, as of a wind among autumn leaves. Judith put her hand on Tony's arm and clutched her parasol firmly. A wide, low carriage came slowly around the bend and stopped. A little fat old woman in a black bonnet sat in the carriage alone, with the rugs piled up to her breast. On one side of the carriage was walking the Princess of Wales, and on the other side the Empress Frederick of Germany, with her brother, the Prince. The Princess of Wales made a sign with her hand. It was for them. The Duchess of Suffield marched Judith across to the carriage.

"This is the Duchess of Leftwich, madam," said the Princess.

The little old woman fidgeted a moment with her glasses, got them settled at last to her satisfaction, and then bent the gaze of her pale eyes on Judith.

"We are happy to welcome you to England," she said in a quavering, irritable voice, and waited for an answer.

"You are very good, madam," said Judith.

Victoria is in the last years of her reign when Judith Quayle, a young and very beautiful American girl, becomes the wife of Tony, the Duke of Leftwich. Judith leaves the land of her birth behind her and faces England an Englishwoman, devoted and grateful. England has given her Tony, and to her, Tony, at the time, is her world. But Judith soon finds that the Tony of her love is a fleeting illusion. Tony is weak and dissipated and prone to wander from the family fireside on debauches that are the gossip of the British nobility. With the birth of their son, Ned, Judith changes from the romantic, illusioned girl to a firm, hardened woman. She tells Tony that her love for him has been mistaken; but for the sake of Ned she continues as his wife. Her beauty and charm are enhanced by the brilliant mind and lovely manner which comes with her sophistication. She becomes one of the most admired women in English society. She takes an interest in politics and assists Tony's cousin, Henry Arleigh, to contest a difficult seat in the mining district of Lancashire, with brilliant success. Judith becomes a modern woman long before the modern woman's time.

One of the astonishing things which attract the readers attention in The Anatomy of Virtue is the manner in which the author brings his story to its astonishing climax in modernity out of the logical development of events which extend over many years. The book opens with the quiet, gentle days of Victoria's reign and ends with the loud blasts of saxophones and the shouts of jazz-mad dancers in a modern London night club.

Judith, the Duchess of Leftwich, is a glorious, character, perennially young. Except for the wisdom which the years have brought her, the Judith who takes her own hospital unit into the World War is not a whit less youthful than the shy, blushing girl who timidly took her high place in English society many years before.

The Anatomy of Virtue is an auspicious beginning as a novelist for Vincent Sheean. He is the daring young journalist who, a few years ago, ventured into the land of the Riffi and later told the story of his adventures in a book called An American Among the Riffi. He is a talented and brilliant writer and everyone who reads the powerful and moving story which he has written in The Anatomy of Virtue will rejoice that he has at last turned his talents to the writing of fiction.

Paul Wilstach, author of Islands of the Mediterranean, Correspondence of John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, etc., is in the movies. Upon learning this astonishing piece of news, his publishers, The Bobbs-Merrill company, became alarmed, for fear that Mr. Wilstach's new book would not be finished before he launched upon his career as a screen star. It seems, however, that Mr. Wilstach appears only in a news reel, showing the great and near great who attended the meeting of the Thomas Jefferson Centennial Commission at Jefferson's home at Monticello, Vrginia, in August. Mr. Wilstach has spent much time at Monticello, gathering material for his books about the first "Jeffersonian Democrat," and he was invited to several Jefferson celebrations in Lynchburg, Charlottesville and Monticello, Virginia, during August, all of which he attended. Among the famous guests were Governor Ritchie and William McAdoo. Mr. Wilstach's new book is Patriots Off Their Pedestals.

FORMER TEACHER HERE WINNER IN $10,000 SUIT

Henry E. Polley, former principal of First ward school, here, was found not guilty of contributory negligence by an Oshkosh court in the $10,000 damage action brought by Anna Stratton, of Fremont, to recover for the drowning of her son, Arden, in 1925. The jury after deliberating about two hours, found Polley not liable.

It had been alleged that the waves from the Polley boat caused a clam-fishing scow to upset. Arden Stratton, the occupant, was drowned. The trial lasted five days.

Reservations Will Be Accepted Thursday Morning Prior to Dinner

Many old settlers and residents of Outagamie-co will meet at an old settler's dinner and program at the Hotel Northern Thursday afternoon, according to a tabulation of reservations for the affair already in. It is thought by those in charge that the inclement weather has kept many of the settlers outside of Appleton from making reservations and as a result plans have been made to take reservations at the hotel immediately preceding the dinner. The dinner will be held at 12 o'clock noon.

The program will open at 11:30 in the morning with whistling selections by George Lausman. His numbers will be From Frisco to Cape Cod, Valencia, Kukuk Waltz and Silver Threads Among the Gold. The afternoon program will open at 1 o'clock with the general assembly call of the fife and drum by Joseph Birmingham of Hortonville.

The remainder of the program is as folow: Address of welcome, O. W. Schaefer, Violin solo, Joseph Birmingham; volunteer remarks, by "old timers," fife and old time quick step, by Mr. Birmingham; old time memoranda; fife and drum music, Mr. Birmingham; Closing song, Old Auld Lang Syne, by the audience.

FIRE! FIRE! FIRE!

Will Concrete Blocks Burn Crumble or Disintegrate?

For two years past the UNDERWRITER LABORATORIES have conducted severe fire tests on Concrete Block Walls.

These tests have been much more severe than could be obtained in any actual fire. In none of the many tests made did fire penetrate the walls or did the blocks crumble or disintegrate, in fact with 2000° of heat on one side of the walls it was 3 hours before the unexposed side became hot enough to set paper, that might be in contact with it, on fire.

The Underwriters Laboratories recommend a 2 hour fire rating on Concrete Blocks made of materials and methods as are employed in the manufacture of

Ruberoid Shingles Saved It

"Will Ruberoid Shingles safeguard my home against fire?" This is a question we are often asked. No more definite answer could be given than in the following letter:

"Last September, a house only fifty feet from mine, burned to the ground. As the roof and gables of my home are covered with Ruberoid Strip-shingles (Octabs), I felt no uneasiness and, went over to help my neighbor.

The heat was so intense it cracked all my window panes on that side of my house, but not once did the roof or shingled gables catch. Everybody who saw the fire said that the Ruberoid Shingles saved my house." (Signed) Mrs. S. M. Shinn. Kannapolis, N. C.

The high regard which architects, contractors, and home owners have for Ruberoid Shingles and Roofings is, however, only partially due to their fire-resistant qualities. They are of the highest quality through and through. In the extensive Ruberoid line you will find a shingle or roofing which meets your requirements as to appearance, quality and price.

Come in and see samples or phone us for descriptive literature.

Blonde Type Must Not Forget That Her Clothes Must Be Dainty; Ruffles And Tiers Most Becoming

BY HENRI BENDEL

NEW YORK—The third in our series of costumes designed for special types of beauty brings us to the blonde.

Whenever I hear anyone say, "Oh she can wear anything, any color," I know the speaker is talking about a blonde.

For blondes come nearer wearing any type of dress, any lines any color than either the exotic brunette, or the temperamental Titian.

But right there lies the danger. Wearing anything fairly well, the blonde may forget her birthright. That is to look dainty. She may be five feet tall, or six—as is the beautiful wife of a famous portrait painter—but the blonde must must be dainty to be right. Meticulous grooming and careful choice of clothes achieve this.

BE FUSSY, BLONDES

Fussy clothes become the blonde more than other women. Such things as ruffles, tiered skirts, flounces and drapes, elaborate lace yokes, tricky little suits and all the do-dads that the feminine heart seems to crave detract less from a blonde than from any other type of beauty.

Pinks apparently were made for blondes. They can do pretty things to her. A dainty pink enhances her daintiness and adds a modest note. Rose can make her look like a bewitching sophisticated flirt. But red as it makes her [illegible] and dangerous.

Blues are good from the faintest robin's egg blue to midnight. So are greens. Browns are excellent on the demi-blonde. Grays on others. Lavenders and purples sometimes are a riot on a blonde. But for yellows—the blonde should forego yellows unless she is a honey blonde when a daffodil yellow sometimes brings out the amber of her eyes and is stunningly lovely.

The evening wrap shown today is designed with an eye to blonde feminine fussiness, though it is so skillfully worked that it appears simple. It is a rich cardinal red velvet wrap, fashioned in three tiers, with the yoke and Elizabethan collar shirred tightly, leaving little discs of plain velvet which add a polka dotted motif. It is lined with shell pink crepe and has a spacious pocket inside for the opera glasses, vanity case and what-not a little blonde would need.

The little hat is another example how the simplest apparel the blonde wears may have frills or fur-belows added and she can get away with it. The hat is a charming little mushroom import of beige felt. Most women, for a daytime hat, would have only a banding. But Miss Chandler chooses an ornate wreath of velvet leaves in rich, gaudy autumn reds, yellows and browns—and it makes her look demure.

PERIOD GOWNS PERFECT

The period gowns, with their tightly fitted bodices and bouffant skirts, are perfect blondes. Nothing on earth is more dainty or more feminine than the fitted bodice of soft shimmering materials which flare to give the grace and charm of the old-time full skirt.

The evening gown shown today is a Lanvin import—in shell pink, silver and lamante. The little bodice is of satin, fashioned tight, with a quaint pointed yoke of silver spangles and diamante. A bow-knot of similar trimming is worked in the girdle of the bodice, with long streamers of the sparkling ornamentation swinging gracefully.

The bouffant skirt is made in four sections of chiffon each flaring section double tiered, and all floating softly in rhythmic motion as the wearer dances. No jewels are needed with so dainty a dress as this. More than a tasseled neckline would, in fact, detract from the delicacy of the picture.

For while blondes can wear anything and all the ruffles their hearts desire, the wise blonde knows that the more feminine and childlike she appears, the more appealing she is. And she chooses her dainty costumes accordingly.

THE TINYMITES

By Hal Cochran

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

ALL through the night the Tinies flew upon their kite, and then all knew that they had been real lucky, saving [illegible] from his fate. The carnival [illegible] left behind they found were [illegible] far from kind, and just to think that they'd escaped made all the Tinies feel great.

As morning came, they all awoke from one long [illegible], and Scouty spoke: "I think Japan [illegible] hand. I hope [illegible] I'd like to have a cup of [illegible] would taste good to me [illegible] near 'cause I smell [illegible] in the air."

"[illegible]" Coppy. "This is grand [illegible] [illegible] I see [illegible] quaint [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

And sure enough they reached the ground and left their kite with careful bound. They landed in a tea field and some Japs were working near. Said Scouty, "They're a friendly lot. They'll treat us nice as like as not. Let's run right up and say hello. There's nothing we need fear."

The Japanese were very kind and said "Of course we do not mind you little fellows coming here. We're glad as we can be. Why don't you go up into town, enjoy yourselves and look around. This merely is a tea field and there's much more there to see."

The Tinies thought this good advice and shortly found the town real nice. They met a funny little Jap who offered them a ride. He pulled a little two-wheeled cart. The Tinies thought him very smart and when he said, "I'll pull you all," they promptly jumped inside.

(The Tinymites have a tea party in the next story.)

TRAINING SCHOOLS FOR DADS

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

A [illegible] for what they are going. In the words of one student, 'they're afraid they'll be [illegible] later if they stop."

I wonder if I may venture a suggestion to American colleges and universities. It may fall to earth where someone may pick it up and make use of it. I am too inarticulate on the subject to know how, when or where to begin revamping the system myself.

A man takes a boy to college. The boy is duly entered, his tuition paid and the parent goes off. Now the [illegible] know [illegible] know [illegible] what he is to prepare. The boy can't be blamed, for no one has told him he is too young to have a decided plan of his own. His father doesn't know, because he has never been to college. He has no precise idea of what the boy may learn there.

It seems to me that a lot of it is blind groping. The worst of it is the boy wants to know and the father wants to know but just how are they to find out? There seems to be little aid in shaping the boy's destiny.

Why can't colleges and universities establish centers where parents can go beforehand and be enlightened in plain English as to what their children can get if they spend four thousand dollars on their training? Catalogues that talk in units and credits and academic terms don't mean a thing more to them than the Koran. Even an A. B. at the end of four years isn't the answer.

SAINT AND SINNER

By Anne Austin

"How did you happen to marry Fred Lytton, Peggy?" Faith asked gently, holding the girls' cold, trembling hands firmly in hers.

"You won't let him suspect I told you?" Peggy quivered, her lovely, sultry red mouth jerking spasmodically. "But of course you won't! You're my friend! I can hardly believe I have a friend. I met Fred when I was playing second lead in a musical comedy—'The Heartbreakers' — in Chicago. He saw the show, then began to bombard me with presents and invitations and flowers. I returned the gifts and that intrigued him, and he insisted that I go out to supper with him. He treated me royally, deferentially. I was flattered, of course, for he told me that he was rich and prominent in this city.

"I never dreamed of marrying him. I wouldn't even let him kiss me. He began asking me to marry him the second time I was out with him, and I soon saw that he was getting desperate. He had two fights with men who dared to make dates with me — old friends of mine," her voice faltered, as if the memory pained her.

"Oh, Peggy!" Faith moaned. "How dreadful for you! But—why, why did you marry him?"

"I'm coming to that," Peggy said, with a bitter twist of her beautiful mouth. Fire blazed in her violet eyes. "He wouldn't believe I was—good. Was always taunting me, suggesting I'd had—lovers. And then he had some dirty private detective to follow me and—and he found out the truth. The fact is, Faith," she lifted her head proudly and stared unflinchingly into Faith's eyes, "that I have a baby. Three years old, the dearest, most wonderful little boy in the world. I—I wasn't married to his father. And—his father is dead, now." Her voice broke again and tears flooded her blue eyes. "You can hate me if you like, despise me, but I'm not sorry! I'll never be sorry I had my baby!"

"I can't hate you, Peggy, or judge you," Faith assured her compassionately. "But—I don't understand about Mr. Lytton—"

"Oh, he used the baby as a club to force me to marry him. He promised to adopt the baby after we were married, telling his friends that — that since we can't have children we'd decided to adopt one. It's true — I can't have any more children, and I did not deceive him about it. But now —now that I've married a man I can't bear, whose very touch makes me shudder, he has laughed at me for taking his promise seriously. He says he'd rather kill the baby than have him in our home—home! jail!—reminding him constantly of the man I loved. He's so jealous that he suspects every man who comes here. That's one reason he wants to build a country home. He wants to hide me away from the world, so that no one can see me but him. He's quite mad. I told him I'd live there on one condition only—that he keep his word about adopting my baby. He refused, laughed at me, and I—I'm desperate."

The mother heart of Faith spoke impulsively, forgetting for the moment that her husband's business was so deeply involved: "You musn't go on living with that terrible man, Peggy! He's forfeited every right to your loyalty. You belong to your baby! If I were you, I'd go to him if I had to walk from here to Chicago!"

"Splendid, Mrs. Hathaway! What a success you'd make as a tragedy queen!" It was Fred Lytton, grinning evilly at the two women from the threshold of his wife's sitting room.

JACK MULHALL WINS STARDOM AFTER FOURTEEN YEARS ACTING

BY DAN THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., — When Jack Mulhall first broke into the class of popular movie actors, the industry hadn't even coined the word "star" for its use.

That was some years ago, And Jack is still sitting on the crest of his popularity. But it has been only during the last year that his rise in the heavens of celluloidia has been meteoric.

There were two things that kept Jack in the same old rut for so many years. One was that he was too conscientious and the others was that he wasn't conscientious enough. One day Jack would get the idea into his head that he was being paid for acting so he should act. And the next day he would "clown" all over the set and take nothing seriously.

WRONG BOTH TIMES

"I realize now that I was wrong in both instances," admits the actor. "But you know, I really did think that if I didn't act I wasn't earning my salary. Then one day, not so long ago either, I woke up. I always got along fine with individuals in my private life. They seemed to like my personality. And I realized that if I was going to get by on the screen I would have to give audiences that same personality. So I stopped acting and started being natural.

"Another thing I have learned is that this is a serious business just like any other business. During the last year I have been looking at it in that light and working hard."

WINS POPULAR VOTE

Judging from his last few pictures, Jack actually has "found" himself. And by the time 1928 rolls around he will be elevated to the star division. A few weeks ago he was voted the second most popular male featured players in a national census taken by a film magazine.

It took Mulhall a long time to learn not to be an actor. There are only two actors in Hollywood who can act and still appear natural on the scene. They are Charlie Chaplin and Adolphe Menjou. Both are entirely different on the screen than in real life and yet they appear perfectly real.

EGYPT'S QUEEN WEARS VEIL WHEN FISHING

Vittel, France—(AP)—Queen Nazli of Egypt, who is now taking the cure here, hopes to fish for trout in the Vosges mountain streams.

Her Majesty is an accomplished faresh water fisherwoman and keeps herself constantly supplied with the best fishing tackle and rods available from British firms. Even while casting flies for speckleded beauties she wears the veil which Egyptian custom and the Moslem religion prescribe for women.

Queen Nazli, whose great-great-grandfather was a French army officer who turned Mussulman, has modern ideas. But, according to a member of her suite who spoke to the Associated Press for Her Majesty, "the queen believes that she should set an example in conservatism to her countrywomen. Modern in her tastes, she realizes that while the Egyptian woman of today is forging ahead very fast, thanks to her new facilities for education, abuses of the new freedom during the transition period are inevitable.

"Therefore the King and Queen are holding themselves back against the new customs. They are ready to abandon old symbols, such as the veil, as soon as Egypt as a whole has sufficiently assimilated western civilization."

Queen Nazli speaks English, French Turkish and Arabic. Besides fishing she loves photography. She also paints and plays the piano. She has three children, the oldest seven and the youngest five years of age.

While she is at Vittel, King Fouad is at Vichy, taking the cure. Their majesties will make a state visit to Paris in October and later will visit Belgium.

Well-planned newspaper advertising, he said, will draw more persons to church than noisy chimes, and at the same time will not disturb the slumbers of those who choose not to attend.

SIDELIGHTS OF COMMERCE

U. S. EXPORTS INCREASE

"The United States has passed permanently to the position of a capital exporting nation and it is likely that she will continue for an indefinite period of time to export capital abroad," says the Foreign Policy Association, commenting on the fact that American foreign investments increased some $557,000,000 net last year. The association estimates the interest and dividends accruing to the United States in 1926 at $688,000,000.

CIGAR IMPORTS INCREASE

Exports of cigars from the Philippine Islands to the United States during July reached 11,600,000 as compared with 9,000,000 for June, and nearly equalled the shipments of July, 1926.

WOULD USE COTTON BAGS

General use of cotton bags in place of bags made of other materials by the wholesale grocery trade would increase the consumption of American cotton some 750,000 bales, the Department of Agriculture estimates. About 225,000 bales now supply the need.

AUSTRALIAN BANKS MERGE

Australian banks have felt the merger urge and three already have consolidated, while other consolidations are expected. Amalgamation of the Bank of Victoria with the Commercial Banking Company, the Western Australian Bank with the Bank of New South Wales and the Royal Bank of Australia with the English, Scottish and Australian Bank leaves the Bank of Adelaide virtually the only small independent bank in Australia.

TEA IMPORTS DECREASE

A decline in the imports of Chinese made tea into this country is expected to be shown in forthcoming Department of Agriculture reports as a result of the activities of the warring armies in the tea-producing districts. India black tea was imported in greater quantity to meet the deficit in shipments from China.

NEWFOUNDLAND HAS FUTURE

Interest is awakening in the future of Newfoundland which, while known chiefly for its 315,000,000 annual exports of fish, may soon be a major factor in world trade in lumber, paper, ore and other products. Iron ore deposits are said to be among the largest in the world, while the present daily production of 7900 tons of paper and pulp is expected to become insignificant when the country's resources are developed.

USE WASTE FOR BOARD

Crushed sugar, or bagasse, once used as a fuel for mills, now is used chiefly in the manufacture of a new wall board. The world supply of bagasse, it is estimated, will be sufficient to make 9,000,000,000 feet of wall board yearly.

UNVEIL MARKER AT D. A. R. CONVENTION

Three-Day Meeting Will Start With Registration on Morning of Oct. 27

Green Bay—(AP)—One of the features of the state convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution to be held at Green Bay the latter part of this month will be the unveiling of the marker on the site of the home of Eleazer Williams, the supposed last Dauphin of France.

The three day meeting, opening Oct. 27, is expected to attract a large delegation and many visitors as the biennial election of officers is to be held.

Among the speakers announced in a tentative program by Mrs. W. H. Clark, Green Bay, the local regent are: Mrs. Ralph H. Hess, of Madison, state regent: Mrs. Alfred Brosseau, of Washington, president-general and Mrs. Russel W. Magna, of Washington, financial chairman of the constitutional hall committee. James H. McGillan, mayor of Green Bay, will represent the local chapter in one of the addresses of the convention.

Registration will take place Thursday morning, Oct. 27, with the afternoon devoted to the unveiling of William's home site marker. Friday will be a business day for the delegates with committee reports and other business. A banquet will be held in the evening.

At a closing session Saturday morning the election of the officers for the next two years will take place.

Fall And Sinclair Will Go On Trial October 17

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington — Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair go on trial in the District of Columbia supreme court on Oct. 17 on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government in connection with the leasing of the famous Teapot Dome naval oil reserve.

After endless delays, legal quibbles, entanglements, postponements and maneuerings, this case that aroused the nation nearly five years ago is due to enter the last stage of its long-drawn career.

And Washington, casting an eye over the record and cocking an ear toward the reports and rumors that emanate from arious evounsel chambers, is wondering if the government will have any better luck in its efforts to jail Sinclair than it had in its effort to jail Edward F. Doheny.

The Fall-Sinclair trial will be the third presentation of the government oil cases before a jury.

DOHENY ACQUITTED

Fall and Doheny were acquitted of conspiracy charges in connection with the Elk Hills lease, although the supreme court shortly afterward made the jury that turned in that verdict look peculiar by cancelling the Elk Hills lease, branding the lease as fraudulent and corrupt and forcing Doheny to pay back to the government more than $13,000,000.

Then Sinclair was tried on charges of contempt of the Senate for refusing to answer questions during their investigation of the leases. He was convicted and his appeal is now pending.

Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts, special government counsel who are handling the oil cases, are making no predictions. The jury in this trial will be like the jury in the Fall-Doheny case in that it will not have the supreme court decision to guide it. The supreme court ruling on the Teapot Dome lease, which the circuit court of appeals cancelled as tainted by fraud will not be handed down until after the criminal proceedings are over.

Any one who wishes may bet on the government's chances to beat Sinclair before the supreme court and recover Teapot Dome, but you never can tell about a jury of twelve good men and true.

Pomerene and Roberts were sorely disappointed with the Doheny jury, but as there are more technicalities and maneuvers in high finance involved in the present case they are not over-confident of convicting Sinclair and Fall. They may even get another jury none of whose members have ever read about the case in the newspapers. In the last trial, the prosecution had used up nine out of ten challenges when the defense had used but four, after which they were helpless, for if they used the tenth challenge almost anyone could get on the jury after that.

The prosecution would as soon try this case outside of the District of Columbia, where people vote, assume responsibilities of citizenship and do not believe generally that it's really no crime to gyp the government.

HIGH GRADE JUDGES

On the other hand, the judges of the district supreme court where the trial will be held are all high-grade. Justice Hoehling gave a virtually perfect performance at the Fall-Doheny trial and Justice Siddons, who will preside at the coming trial, is highly respected.

The trend of the government's case probably will follow closely the lines of its civil suit to annul the Teapot lease, but different tactics are used in reaching the juror's mind from those employed in impressing the judicial mind.

It appears that the Fall-Sinclair jury will not be subjected to a lurid picture of the yellow peril bogey, that it will not be likely at the outset to consider the hard-boiled Sinclair a kindly old man incapable of misdoing and that it will not be told that the $230,500 Sinclair is alleged to have sneaked to Fall was only a friendly loan from one old prospector to another.

But it may be difficult to convince an ordinary jury beyond doubt that Sinclair bribed Fall. The government would like to be able to show that Sinclair planked down a couple of hundred thousand dollars on Fall's desk when the lease was signed, but it can't. It wil try to show that Sinclair passed the bribe by promoting the Continental Trading Co., Ltd., in Canada, which was used only to buy oil already contracted for and sell it at a profit, some of said profits being converted to liberty bonds later brought to Fall in Pueblo, Colo., by his son-in-law, M. T. Everhart.

DIFFERENT METHOD

A different method from that of sending Fall by hand a black bag containing $100,000!

The government, however, considers that its case is strengthened by evidence that Fall allowed no competitive bidding for Teapot Dome and that Fall handled the whole lease virtually by himself, in a secret and high-handed manner. The defense will contend that there was danger of drainage if the government didn't act quickly, but the prosecution says Fall had been advised by various government experts that there was no immediate danger, if any.

Judging from its conduct of the Fall-Doheny trial, the government will not try to tell the jury that the court of appeals held that the Teapot lease was obtained by fraud and corruption.

Sinclair probably will not take the witness stand in his own defense as Doheny did. Sinclair wouldn't tell the Senate what it wanted to know and he hasn't testified in the civil case. His attitude has been: "Try and prove it!"

ONE NEW WITNESS

One new witness is expected to testify whose story may be of major importance. This is Robert W. Stewart, head of the Standard Oil Co., of Indiana. The government has shown that Sinclair, H. S. Osler, H. M. Blackmer, J. E. O'Neil and Stewart met in New York to organize the Continental company.

Its missing link of evidence concerned details of this organization and Continental's subsequent operations as they affected the bonds transfer. The records were burned when Continental was taken over by the Sinclair interest. Blackmer and O'Neil left for Europe. Osler didn't provide the desired information and Stewart was abroad when most wanted.

Stewart has since acknowledged a subpena for the Fall-Sinclair trial and it may be that the government will obtain its first important testimony about the Continental Trading transaction on which so much seems to hinge.

After a long search, Blackmer was located in Europe. Although he stands liable to the loss of $100,000 in property under a new law obtained by Senator Tom Walsh, Blackmer is not expected to return here for the trial and there is no way to extradite him.

LUTHERAN LAYMEN OF STATE TO ORGANIZE

Brotherhood Is Sequel to Religious Work Carried on During World War

Milwaukee —(AP)— A new organization, the National Brotherhood of Lutheran Laymen, will have its inception in Milwaukee, Oct. 12-13-14 as the sequel to religious work carried on in cantonments during the war days.

Meetings under the name of the Lutheran Brotherhood of America, which was organized in war times, 500 delegates from the United States and Canada will bring about reorganization of the body, it has been announced by Waldemar Wehe, Milwaukee, president, of the Milwaukee Federation of Lutheran Laymen.

An expansion of membership in the group, reaching every Lutheran congregation in the nation and Canada, probably will result from the Milwaukee meeting, according to Mr. Wehe.

A mass meeting, to be addressed by Gov. Fred R. Zimmerman, will open the convention Wednesday, Oct. 12.

Dr. W. A. Granville, Chicago, president of the Brotherhood, also will speak at the opening session, followed by Dr. S. P. Long, president of the Chicago Lutheran Bible school and Dr. M. G. G. Scherer, secretary of the United Lutheran church.

Officers of the new organization will be named by the nominating committee Thursday morning and committees to function during the convention and the coming year will be appointed. A sight-seeing tour of Milwaukee and its suburbs will be on the program for the afternoon, followed by a banquet in the evening.

Dr. J. W. Kapp, executive secretary of the United Lutheran church, will speak at the Friday morning session, together with N. N. Ronning, editor of the Lutheran publication, The Friend. Dr. Gould Wickey, president of Carthage college and the Rev. Theodore Kokenstad Bremerton, Wash., will speak at the closing meeting Friday afternoon.

WOLF RIVER RAISES OVER FOOT IN RAINS

River Level Still Is More Than Foot Below Normal, Gauge Shows

Riparian land owners on the Wolf river are reporting, the water has risen over a foot in those regions after the recent heavy rains. Previous to that time the water had been two feet two inches high, the lowest level in years. On Monday, Oct. 4, the water was recorded at three feet four inches and included the rise of the past ten days. Normal water depth at the government guage is four feet six inches while the danger mark is seven feet ten inches.

According to the report of Alan H. Tripp, president of the Association for the Relief from High Water the building of a storage reservoir at Post lake and one dam at Shawano, one at Leeman, with a possible straightening out of the kinks on the Embarrass river, will enable the water level at Gills landing in the Wolf never to exceed six feet and six inches at any flood period, in the opinion of engineers and others who have looked into the matter. A great deal depends one the Menominee Indian power project, it is believed. All sides of the question will be given a hearing before the federal power commission at Washington this fall, to determine the outcome.

The river at Gills Landing is expected to rise another six inches in about six days, as it take that long for the upper rains to reach there.

STAGE And SCREEN

LA PLANTE MAKES THEM HAPPY IN "SILK STOCKINGS"

Laura La Plante's famous comedy flair was never better evidenced than in her portrayal of the young bride in Universal's "Silk Stockings" at Fischer's Appleton theatre Sunday.

This is a comedy which skits along the border of tragedy but never touches it, and is hence superbly funny. Miss LaPlante, as a result, has taken a firmer hold than ever on her title as the screen's greatest comedienne.

Universal's beautiful, be-dimpled, blonde star, is a perfect trouper, a thing more necessary in the comedy field than in straight drama.

The story is logical and concerns the troubles of a newly married couple, their little spats and their decision to air their differences in a divorce court. Of course, they don't get the divorce.

John Harron is ideally cast as the young husband. He is young, full of the fire of youth and unsophisticated, the perfect characterization for this role.

The supporting cast is admirably chosen. Otis Harlan as the attorney for both parties is extremely ludicrous. The court sequence, by the way, is about the funniest bit of work that we have ever seen in the screen. It is a laugh from start to finish.

William Austin is as humorous as ever and Marcella Daly is delectable as the vamp. Heinie Conklin is a funny watchman while Burr McIntosh as the sober judge is unbeatable.

The story is from Cyril Harcourt's stage farce "A Pair of Silk Stockings" and was capably directed by Wesley Ruggles.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the feature will be "Tellit To Sweeney" with Chester Conklin.

SUCH POPULARITY MUST BE DESERVED!

BILLY SIXTY, FRANK WALSH TO OPPOSE ARMOUR, FARRELL

Milwaukee Amateur Star, Local Pro Matched With National Champions Here

Butte des Morts Greens in Fine Condition for Exhibition Match Wednesday

Billy Sixty, Milwaukee golf scribe, well known for his prowess as an amateur linksman, and Frank Walsh, pro of the Butte des Morts course and runner-up in the state open meet for the last two years, will furnish opposition for Tommy Armour and Johnny Farrell in their exhibition match at the Butte des Morts links next Wednesday. Armour is National open and Canadian open champion for 1927 and Farrell is high pro medalist of the country with eight open triumphs to his credit this year. The men are rivals to the nth degree on the links but pals when the day is done

GUESTS AT BANQUET

The annual banquet of the local club will be held at 6 30 Wednesday evening at Hotel Northern and Armour and Farrell will be the guests of honor, which should insure a large attendance of local club members. Beside, W. D Richardson, golf editor of the New York Times, may be a guest and if he is, he will talk. Mr. Richardson has been invited by the local club and indications are that he will be present.

The greens of the local club are in excellent condition, club officers said Saturday. The rain of the last few weeks, while numerous were comparatively light, the officers said, and have improved the greens, if anything. The admission price to see a pair of the nation's geratest players will be $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for youngsters

MILWAUKEE WINNER TO BATTLE IN CHI

Winner of Joey Clein-Bonillas Go May Be Matched With Bud Taylor

Milwaukee—Billy Bobillas and Joey Clein may not get the windup position on the all star card at the Milwaukee Auditorium next Tuesday night, but they are the lads who are in the limelight in Chicago just now.

Mique Malley, Chicago promoter wants the winner of the Clein-Bonillas bout for a meeting with Bud Taylor at Chicago the week following. Mique will be here to watch the boys and use his own judgement as to which one he wants for the clever Buddy.

Howard Bentz is preparing under the guiding hand of Richie Mitchell for his bout with Nick Taft of Chicago, a hardy Greek battler. Taft has had about sixty fights in all, 48 of them amateur and twelve professional. His recent bouts were: Beat Harry Boem by K. O. in 3 rds; Freddie Daniels, 1rd; Ed Sweeney, 2 rds; Frank Turned, 2; Billy Brent (colored) draw, 6; Frank Turner, K. O. 4; Joe Rocco, K. O. 1; Ed George K O. 3; Jack Taylor, won, 6; Lou Gordon, won, 6. He lost to Walcott Langford in 8 rds.

With both Taft and Bentz hard hitters it looks as though the contest will not go the entire ten rounds.

There is some speculation as to who will win in the Harry Kahn-Billy Mc Cann match. Kahn is given the edge, but there are those who feel that Mc Cann will give the local southpaw plenty of argument. During the past year McCann has fought such tough lads as Baby Joe Gans, Young Sam Thompson, both colored stars of California, beat Billy Alger, who gave Sergt. Sammy Baker a hard fight in Chicago Thursday night, and also beat Dick Hoppe in Los Angeles.

CARROLL OPPOSES NO-SCOUTING IDEA

Pioneers Say They Cannot Prevent Reports of Alumni, Students

Lawrence college's idea of abolishing scouting of football games this fall struck an obstruction this week, when Coach Norris Armstrong of Carroll replied to the letter sent out by the Blue athletic department. Carleton, the team which played here Saturday afternoon, was the first to come to a non-scouting agreement with Lawrence. The local school authorities had sent out letters to every school they play this year, Ripon, Beloit, Carleton, Carroll and Northwestern, asking them to agree not to scout Lawrence with Lawrence making the same agreement with them.

Only two replies, those of Carleton and Carroll, had been received up to Friday. Coach Armstrong said that he was agreeable but that he could not very well stop the reports of students of Carroll or and alumni, not delegated as scouts, who might attend Lawrence games, therefore the Lawrence idea was not feasible. It undoubtedly is merely a subterfuge to keep from entering a non-scouting agreement with Lawrence as only official scouts can turn in a real report of a game. Enthusiastic alumni do not know the fine points of the game and what a coach is especially looking for and their reports on weak and strong points of rival teams, are usually contradictory. Only official scouts need be abolished, but Carroll probably is using the alumni excuse to keep its [illegible] scouts in the field.

College 1927 Captains

MOREHEAD, NORTH CAROLINA

Chapel Hill, N. C.—The third Morehead of North Carolina will end his football career this coming November.

This third Morehead, who is also captain of the Tarheels this season, hopes to end it by leading his eleven to a Southern Conference championship, despite strong teams at Alabama, Vanderbilt, Louisiana State, and other schools.

Garrett Morehead is from Charlotte. He is easily the outstanding tackle in the Carolinas, and one of the best in Dixie.

He has played tackle for two years and will play that position again this year.

The Tarheel skipper is not a flashy player, but is always in where the going is toughest He is steady and reliable and is one of the most potent factors in the strength of the North Caroline line.

This young man is just 21 years old and is the youngest player ever to captain a varsity football team at North Carolina.

PASS RULE STILL WORRIES COACHES

Mentors Undecided What Effect Pass Is Going to Have on Game

BY BILLY EVANS

Football coaches are still very much in the dark as to what effect the backward and forward pass is going to have on the general style of play this season.

Those with whom I have talked seem very much in doubt as to what is really going to happen. Some expressed the belief that before the close of the season many amazing formations might be sprung as a result of careful study and experiments.

Others are inclined to think that the new restrictions relative to the passing game are going to so change the style of play, that to the oldtimer, football will be considered as having gone to the dogs.

I am inclined to think that much agitation pro and con will be raised over the new rules governing the passing game before another season rolls around.

In defense of the football rulemakers, it must be said they have the courage to try out new ideas and more courage to go back to the old system if they prove failures.

See where Coach Stagg sent his Chicago grid warriors into battle against Oklahoma, with a prayer that the Maroons would be able to bear up, should they be defeated They were.

Some years ago, Centre College started this "victory by the prayer route" theory by kneeling on the field just before the kickoff. The team became known as the "Prayin' Colonels" and received much publicity because of their methods.

However, when Centre surprised the football world by a victory over the great Harvard team, it was the ability of one "Bo" McMillin to be able to outdodge the Harvard players in a broken field as well as run a little faster to boot that made such a thing possible.

Prayer is most helpful in developing character but football games can only be won by outscoring the opposition. Verbal efforts are negative.

Football fans throughout the country are awaiting patiently the big tests that the Notre Dame team finally faces. Few coaches are willing to tackle so hard a list of dates as Knute Rockne.

Some of the new rules, it is said, have been framed with an intent to slow up Rockne's system. The change made in the shift rule is more or less directly aimed at him since few elevens work with greater speed or precision in their shift plays than the athletes coached by Rockne.

It has always been Rockne's aim to get speed, develop a bewildering offense and let the rest of the game take care of itself. A great offense has always been Notre Dame's best defense.

It will be interesting to see how the officials in the big games rule on Rockne's shift plays this fall. He insists he will be able to keep within the rules without slowing up his attack. Other coaches express doubt on that point.

Rockne again appears to have another well balanced eleven and the results of the more important games on his schedule will definitely determine just how much the new shift rule has handicapped his style of play.

Green Bay—The Duluth Eskimos, headed by the famous Ernie Nevers, who is ranked with the greatest footballers of all time, will have it out with the Green Bay Packers at the City stadium, Sunday afternoon in a National league game. Hostilities will start promptly at 2:15 and the game will be played rain or shine.

The Northerners are coming here with a classy aggregation of footballers. This year's club is said to have a decided edge on the 1926 machine with which the Duluthians turned the country from coast to coast and finished well up in the pro loop pennant chase.

EIGHT NEW PLAYERS

Eight new players are sporting the Eskimos' colors this season and there are enough regulars from '26 back in togs to give perfect balance to the gridiron machine. The Northerners started off with a pair of victories in non-league games. The Duluth All Stars were sat on 30 to 6 while the Virginia Miners took the count 24 to 0. These are both creditable scores as Nevers who is the 'spark-plug' of the club did not participate in either fracas. Nevers was pitching ball for the St. Louis Browns until last Saturday. He joined his team on Monday and the Packer fray will be his first gridiron start of the season.

Dewey Scanlon, who is one of the veteran managers in professional football, has gone the limit this season to support Nevers with an all-star cast of gridders. In strengthening his club. The Eskimos helmsman rounded up a flock of stars from the Pacific coast, all of whom were first given the official O. K. by Nevers. Potsy Clark, McNellis and Belden are said to be nifty ball carriers and passers Each of these players earned his football spurs in California.

THREE NEW TACKLES

The Eskimos have three new tackles in McCarthy, Suess and Shanley. McCarthy and Suess are products of California while Shanley got his sheepskin at Oklahoma. Blood, of Minnesota, who played with Milwaukee a few years back, has been added to the backfield. Cobb Rooney and Method, two experienced pro footballers and Nevers, himself, round out the set of carriers.

Joe Rooney, one of the best wing men in pro football and Fritz Cronin from St. Mary's college are playing the ends for Duluth Five veterans are available for the center trio, Kiesling, Manion and Bill Rooney are the guards while Stein and Doc Williams fill in atthe snapper-back's job. The Eskimos are certainly well fortified in the middle of the line

This will be Duluth's first game in the 1927 championship race Following the battle here, The Eskimos perform in Madison on Oct 16 and then make a 'detour' to the Atlantic coast before hitting the trial for California where they will chase the cowhide' during the Christmas holidays The Eskimos are not expected to get back home 'up north' until about the middle of January.

PLENTY OF TROUBLE

Duluth has always given the Packers plenty of trouble on the gridiron and, from the looks of things, Sunday's game will be no exception to the rule because, on paper, the visitors look like one of the best clubs in the National league.

POLISH UP PASS DEFENSE

The pass defense has also been polished up as the Eskimos are known to be pretty near as much at home in the air as the Bays, themselves This year, the Duluthians' tosses are expected to be more deceptive because there are other players behind the line besides. Nevers who can hurl the cowhide like a bullet.

It will be a fighting Packer squad that steps on the field to mix with the Eskimos. The one-point margin upset at the hands of the pesky Bears did not set well on the Big Bay Blues squad and the players are determined to start a new winning streak at the expense of Nevers, Rooney Brothers & Co.

MARTIN BURKE WINS BOUT AT FOND DU LAC

Three Knockouts Please Large Crowd of Fight Fans at Fondy

Before one of the largest crowds ever packed into the Fond du Lac auditorium, Martin Burke, New Orleans heavyweight and recent sparring partner of Jack Dempsey, furnished the climax of an evening of rare mitt entertainment Friday by knocking out Carl Augustine, St. Paul in the seventh round of a scheduled 10-round bout Burke weighed 174 and Augustine 171. A large number of Appleton fans attended the show.

There were two other knock outs to please the fans. In the semi-windup, Art Pertile, Iron Mountain, Mich., 171, stopped Billy Ehmke, St. Paul, 164, in the first round. In the second bout of the evening Eddie Ross, St. Paul, knocked out Johnny Busch, Sheboygan, in the first round. Ross closed Busch's eye soon after the round opened and the Sheboygan lad was an easy victim, staggering around the ring half-blinded. In the opener Myron Gross, Fond du Lac, 158, shaded Bert Young, Waukesha, 155. Gross knocked his opponent down three times.

Famous Doctor Operates On Football Field Also

BY BILLY EVANS

Boston — One of Boston's leading surgeons five days of the week, one of football's greatest referees the rest of the time, and rated by many of the leading coaches the best of all football arbiters—that is the dual personality Dr. E. J O'Brien lives during the ten weeks of the football season.

As a youngster, football was always a hobby with Eddie O'Brien, the name by which players, coaches and football fans know the famous surgeon. It continued during his college days at Tufts. It has remained with him ever since.

For many years, the name "E. J. O'Brien, Tufts" has been carried in the summary of most of the outstanding grid games of the year as one of the officials. While Dr. O'Brien is usually selected as the referee he is equally at home at any of the other positions.

In all probability, Eddie O'Brien (we will keep the atmosphere of the football field rather than the clinic and thereby drop the prefix doctor for a time) is the only football official in all the wide world who loses money when acting as one of the officials at a football game. How? Well, let me explain

His football work makes it necessary that he give up Saturday and Sunday, and as a rule it is necessary that he depart for his destination Friday evening. That means for two days each week he must turn over certain details of his work to other surgeons. Since his services as a specialist call for a fancy fee, it is easy to understand why it usually costs Eddie O'Brien plenty of money when he acts as the refree at Yale, and Army, Darthmouth and Harvard, Princeton and Yale, Army and Navy or any of the other big games. A stipend of $150 is a top price for an official.

Why then, you ask, does Dr E J. O'Brien continue his football duties? To be truthful, it is largely in the interest of good health that he welcomes the arrival of the football season each fall. Football is Dr O' Brien's relaxation as well as hobby. He not only loves the game, but fully realizes that for two days each week it makes him forget all about medicines, operations, hospitals and clinics. It is a fall tonic that steadies his nerve and better fits him for his surgical work.

"All work is not good, even for a doctor," explains Eddie O'Brien. "He must play like the rest of the mortals and to me the thrill of the gridiron and the problems that are being constantly put up to the officials provides a relaxation and rest that no vacation could hope to offer."

One look at Dr. O'Brien will readily convince you that he has the right system. He doesn't look within 10 years of his age. He steps around the gridiron like a youngster and has a diplomatic and suave manner in handling any and all situations that seldom ruffle even the player or the coach of the team that is penalized. His wide experience, thorough knowledge of the rules and his tact in handling the most difficult problems make him perhaps the most sought after official in the country.

Many of the reforms in football that have helped to put the game on a higher plane originated with Dr. O'Brien. The fact that he is one of the three leading football officials who serve as the advisory board to the rules committee is a mute tribute to his standing as a judge of play The other two members of the advisory committee are Walter Okeson and Walter Eckersall.

"How long are you going to keep at the refereeing game?" I recently asked Dr. O'Brien.

"Just as long as anybody is willing to have me officiate," was his rejoinder. "I love the game, its associations and its thrills."

"I am inclined to think you merely referee to keep in close touch with injuries that ultimately will require major operations," suggested Major Cavanaugh, Fordham coach, who happened to be present at the time.

NO SCOUTING WON'T PURIFY GRID GAME

Billy Evans Says Abolition of Scouting Will Breed Deception

BY BILLY ADAMS

Is the abolition of the scouting system, to which a number of the leading colleges have agreed, going to purify the game of football?

I don't think so. As a matter of fact, it is my belief that the rule is going to breed deception, make for hyprocrisy. Just how valuable the scouting system in football really is only the coaches can answer. A majority are keen for it, while few if any, say it has no particular value. Therefore, it must be more or less worth while.

Once upon a time, football scouts tried to conceal their identity but seldom got away with it. Some years ago the leading coaches decided to be above board in all things pertaining to scouting.

When a coach sent several men to scout a team, he would inform the opposition of his intent, requesting they be supplied with seats, and so forth. The scouts would then be welcomed by the rival college and given every consideration.

Under the non-scouting system, hypocrisy is sure to enter into preparation for the various big games, since dope is sure to be slipped the coaches from various sources and it will be a difficult matter for them to discriminate as to what advice they should or should not accept.

ENGLISH GIRL SWIMS CHANNEL ON 8TH TRY

London—(AP)—The "never-say-die" spirit of Mercedes Gleitz, 24, London typist and swimming devotee, has at last brought her victory over the treacherous waters of the English channel.

Entering the sea at Cape Gris Nez, on the French coast in the darkness of Friday morning for her eighth attempt in the last five years, she fought tide, bitter cold and fog for 15 hours and 15 minutes, to emerge on a lonely beach north of Folkestone. Then, her resources spent, she collapsed and was taken to Folkestone and put to bed. She is the first English women, the third of her sex and the twelfth person to swim the channel. She is also the first swimmer to perform the feat so late in the season.

She used a side stroke and breast stroke, alternately, resting on her back at intervals.

CRIPPLED ORANGE TEAM EXPECTED TO LOSE AT MARINETTE

Johnston, Roemer Out; Liese at Halfback; Strutz Must Take Care of Punting

BY DAVE

(Special to Post-Crscent)

Marinette — Appleton high school's chances for a victory in the first-place Valley Conference grid battle here this (Saturday) afternoon were decidedly dim when the boys scampered out on Lauerman field at 2 o'clock to be greeted by a large crowd. There were few brave enough to predict better than a tie. It was announced that two regular backfield men would be on the sidelines and one, the star of the league for two years, will not even don a suit. In a suit he would be a constant threat from the sidelines with the enemy not knowing if he would play or not.

Chuck Johnston, fullback, did not even put a suit on due to his side injury and therefore was not even able to get into the game for a few plays or a long punt if he was needed The local mentors decided to take no chance on aggravating his injury. Bob Roemer, halfback, also was unable to play, though he was in a suit. With these men out Kunitz and Liese started at halfs, Strutz at quarter and Popp at full.

This rearwall was one of the poorest on pass defense, Marinette's strong play, that the Orange could place in the field. Strutz and Popp are weak on passes Liese is slow at breaking them up and Kunitz is too small. It looked as if it was up to the Orange ends, Hartung and Schaefer, to carry the pass-breaking burden and up to Appleton to keep the ball as much as possible, so it could score while keeping the enemy from scoring by not allowing them to have the ball. Appleton had to depend on its line for its entire defensive battle and to keep Marinette from the goal line.

STRUTZ KICKS

With Johnson out and Kruse still bothered by a bad hip, Strutz was delegated to do the punting and he had shown no better than the average man, a great disadvantage to the Orange after Johnson's extra long boots had always kept the enemy in its own territory or away from the Orange goal.

OHIO-IOWA BATTLE WEEKEND FEATURE

Indiana, Chicago Meet In Only Other Big Ten Conference Game

Chicago— (AP) —The making and breaking of Big Ten football championship aspirations for 1927 was to start on two gridirons Saturday.

While other members of the conference are busily engaged in upholding the Big Ten prestige in intersectional and neighboring contests, two Big Ten games drew personal interest. Indiana at Chicago and Ohio state at Iowa.

Although Ohio State's showing last Saturday stamped it as a potential threat in the conference, the Buckeyes were primed for a hard fight with their annual nemesis Iowa at Iowa City. Coach Ingwerson of the Hawkeyes was worried over the punting duel that invariably starts Ohio State's assault but his squad was unusually confident. Both elevens were in excellent shape.

INDIANA FAVORED

Pat Page and his Indiana squad, with a victory over the University of Kentucky already on the shelf, expected to measure Coach Stagg's maroons.

Wisconsin plays at Kansas, hopeful of another victory. The Badgers showed signs of great promise in their opener a week ago.

Coach Thistlethwaite and 35 members of the Wisconsin team stopped at Kansas City Friday, breaking their trip from Madison to Lawrence and the Badgers went through their first practice under clear skies on a dry field in 10 days.

The Badgers went through a long signal and passing drill, and topped off the practice with some light scrimmage.

With a team comprised of lettermen, shifty, fast and ready to snatch opportune breaks, Purdue faced Harvard at Cambridge. Their ace, "Cotton" Wilcox was out of the lineup through injury.

Another intersectional affair was Northwestern's game at Evanston with the University of Utah. The Utes brought a veteran lineup with a bag full of tricks. Northwestern, ruler, with Michigan, over the 1926 Big Ten conference race showed power in crushing South Dakota last Saturday.

JOESTING IS OUT

Minnesota's powerful scoring machine expected to face Oklahoma Aggies at Minneapolis without the services of its captain and all-American backfield ace, Herb Joesting, who has a lame shoulder and side.

The unofficial football championship of Michigan was to be decided at Ann Arbor, where the University and Michigan State tangle.

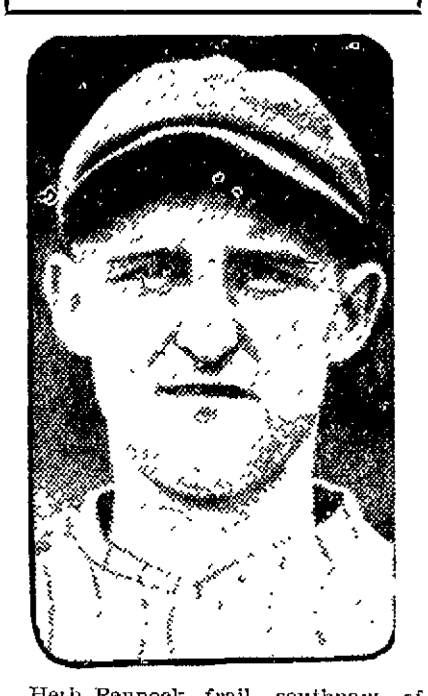
FIVE STRAIGHT



Herb Pennock, frail southpaw of the New York Yanks, made a new bid for game Friday, winning his fifth straight victory in a world's series without a loss to mar his record. Pennock has not been beaten in two series and up to the present in his third, pitching his first game of the 1927 classic Friday.

He also came close to entering a hall of fame where his record probably would never be equalled, that of hurling a no-hit, no-run game in a world's series The Pirates were held hitless until the eighth and after 22 batters had gone out without seeing first, a single and double spoiled his mark. One more hit in the ninth and he was forced to be contented with a three-hit game.

APPLETON-BAY GAME POSTPONED BY RAIN

Appleton's baseball team of the Fox River Valley League will rest on its laurels for the third straight week as the result of rains of the last few days. Brandt park is one sweet bed of water and mud, with even a light man's shoe sinking in a couple of inches in the goo Green Bay was to play here. It will be the third successive Appleton game called in the last month by wet grounds or rain The men had about one practice in that time because of the bad field, and not a single practice was held this last week.

The meeting of loop officials to decide whether to continue the year's schedule, which now will run at least seven weeks longer due to the many postponed games called off by rain, will be held next week, probably Wednesday, according to C. O. Baetz, manager of the Appleton team.

PRO GRIDDER IS GRAD OF HARD KNOCK SCHOOL

Cleveland, O.—Wherever the New York Giants, pro football team, play this year, football fans will get a laugh from Al Nesser's alma amter.

Stars of past years at California, Penn State, Georgia Tech and many other schools are listed, but there is no college alongside Nesser's name.

Instead are found the words "School of Hard Knocks," or an abbreviation of those words.

But Nesser's alma mater—he has been playing football professionally for several years—has equipped him in ability so well that he is considered the outstanding linesman on the Giant's eleven.

PIRATES MUST WIN SATURDAY GAME OR LOSE TITLE CHANCE

"Specs" Hill Is Bush's Only Hope; Huggins to Start Moore or Hoyt

New York—(AP)—Facing a situation as desperate as it could be at this stage of the world series, the Pittsburg Pirates must win Saturday's game from the New York Yankees or find their baseball future behind them for this year.

Charged with three defeats in as many days they cannot afford to lose another. If the American leaguers capture Saturday's contest the series is summarily ended, with the black flag of the Pirates replaced by a white one.

Not since 1914 has a world series ended in four games. These same Yankees failed to win one from the Giants in 1922 but they got one tie.

Only the most faithful among the Pirates supporters held out hope Saturday for an eventual National League triumph. To capture the series the Buccaneers must win four straight games from a club they have not been able to stop in three tries.

Optimistic Pittsburg fans insisted that the Pirates would prolong the struggle beyond its minimum length by winning Saturday.

In an effort to remain in the game, Manager Bush planned to send Carmen Hill, his leading pitcher in games won to the mound Hill won 22 games and lost only half as many during the season. He wears spectacles.

Meadows the other bespectacled Pirate pitcher, was forced from the game Friday under a Yankee seventh-inning attack which grew from a small beginning to proportions beyond his control, but he pitched great ball between bad innings No Pirate pitcher has started and finished a game against the Yankees in the series.

Manager Huggins was uncertain Saturday whether he woul call on Wiley Moore to throw his famous "sinker" at the visitors or send in Waite Hoyt, who won the first game with some help from Moore

60,695 PRESENT

The Pirates, defeated 8 to 1 Friday in a game played before 60,695 persons and marked by Babe Ruth's home run of the series, could not hit Pennock.

They reached the southpaw for only three safeties, their weakest offensive showing of the week. The Clever Pennock, whose appearance in the series was made doubtful by an injury to a knee the day before it started, turned back the first 22 Corsairs at bat. He retired a runner in the eighth before Captain Traynor singled for the first blot on his record. Barnhardt followed with a double to count the only run. Lloyd Waner hit a rather weak drive into the other left in the ninth.

Meadows in the meantime was not quite matching his opponents' efforts but was giving a creditable performance. Meadows' fine pitching was wasted as his mates were failing him at bat not scoring a hit until it was too late to cause excitement from a Pirate standpoint.

FALCON KNIGHT CARS SCORE BIG SUCCESS

Justifies Wisdom of Firm in Placing New $1,000 Make on Market

Detroit—The wisdom of the Falcon Motors Corporation in placing a Knight engined car in the $1,000 price class for the first time in America is justified by the satisfactory sales volume registered during the first five months of its production, according to a statement made by John A. Nichols, Jr., president.

This organization, the only newly formed company to introduce a new line of cars in 1927, is conspicuous in the motor car world today because of the immediate success of the Knight engined sixes introduced. The acceptance of these Falcon-Knight cars by the motor car buyers in general represents a high mark for an entirely new organization.

In his statement Mr. Nichols points out that the success of the Falcon-Knights Six is due to this company filling a demand for a Knight car in a price class never before touched in this country. This together, with the Falcon-Knight's performance and the noticeable trend of the public toward cars employing the Knight sleeve-valve engine, are mainly responsible for the continuous sales growth which is far in advance of the estimate originally fixed when production was first begun.

BIG DEMAND ABROAD

Not only has the Falcon-Knight been accepted in America as a distinctive car but in foreign countries where a Falcon dealership organization is being steadily expanded, the newest entry in America's automobile field is scoring unusual recognition. It is pointed ou that an Europe especially there is a wide demand for Knight engined cars where this type of power plan has long been recognized as one that meets every demand for power, speed, economy, and longer life

"The recent introduction of the Falcon-Knight "Gray Ghost" Sport Speedster rounds out our line of cars," Mr. Nichols said. "The approval won by this addition to the Falcon-Knight line was anticipated by us because of the ready acceptance met b your other models.

"The satisfactory sales figures and the continued steady production of all Falcon-Knight models may be taken as an indication that we see no reason to believe that there will be a let down in sales during the remainder of the year.

"Our rapidly expanding dealer organization throughout the nation is reflected in the sale of our products while the ability of any Falcon-Knight owner to secure service in almost every city removes a handicap often faced by a new manufacturer."

In concluding. Mr. Nichols was highly optimistic of general trade conditions, seeing in the bumper crops a barometer for a continuance of the healthy business condition for the nation as a whole.

BIG INCREASE SHOWN IN EARNINGS OF NASH

Profits Are Over $1,000,000 More Than in Corresponding Period Last Year

At a meeting of the directors of The Nash Motors Company held Thursday, Sept. 22, the regular quarterly dividend of $1 per share was declared and the directors voted an extra dividend of 50 cents per share payable on Nov. 1, 1927, to stockholders of record at the close of business Oct. 20, 1927.

The company reported that for the third quarter of its fiscal year 1927, covering the months of June, July and August, after deducting all expenses of manufacturing, including depreciation, selling, administration and providing for local taxes, and State and Federal income taxes, the net income amounted to $6,298,524.55, as compared with $4,643,658.66 for the corresponding quarter of 1926. Total earnings for the nine months of the fiscal year 1927 amount to $15,790,259.75, against $14,791,991.27 for the corresponding period of 1926. The earnings of the Company for the nine months' period of 1927 have been very satisfactory indeed.

"It might not be amiss to point out," stated President C. W. Nash, "that although our sales were the greatest in our history following the introduction of our new models, we still might have done as even larger volume of business had our productive capacity been greater, as both July and August ended with more orders for immediate deliveries on our books than we could build."

In referring to the future of the Company and the business outlook, President Nash said, "I am prepared to believe that the facts at hand indicate that this Company will continue to enjoy its full share of business as the year goes forward. Our new line has been received with exceptional favor by the public. And in view of general sound commercial and industrial conditions that prevail throughout the country as a whole, and the satisfactory crops reported in most sections, I see no reason not to anticipate continuation of normal good business."

WARSAW CAB DRIVERS WILL HAUL ANYTHING

Warsaw, Poland— (AP) —Anything goes on a Warsaw horse cab.

In their competition with the taxicabs, which happeared in Poland for the first time two or three years ago, the horse cabbies will take anything on board their "sea going" hacks.

It is a daily sight to see horse cabs advancing slowly down the street with loads of pianos, sofas, cupboards, and chairs.

Their rates, too, are cheaper than the taxi rates. The horse drawn vehicles charge about one zloty, which is slightly more than 10 cents for each trip, regardless of the distance, provided it is in the city limits.

CHEVROLET SMASHES ALL PREVIOUS MARKS

This Year's Production Mark Is Expected to Reach 1,000,000 Cars

Shattering all previous production records for the manufacture of gear shift cars for the eight consecutive month this year, the Chevrolet Motor Company in August completed 91,453 units for its greatest August in history, according to figures released today by H. J Kingler, general sales manager for the company.

This new record brings the total output during the first eight months of this year to 786,336 units as against 513,507 units during the same period last year and 732,147 units during the entire year of 1926. The 1926 output was passed this year on August 12.

Last August Chevrolet turned out 76,586 units, showing an increase in August, 1927, of 14,867 units, for a gain of more than 19 per cent.

To accomplish this tremendous volume the nine great Chevrolet factories in the United States have been running practically at peak production during the entire year, while the export plants have maintained a similar fast pace, attesting to the worldwide appeal of the "Most Beautiful Chevrolet."

In view of the fact that the monthly output has consistently exceeded the production schedule—the August volume being 2,000 units over schedule—Chevrolet officials were satisfied that this year's output would approach one million cars.

The monthly gains this year over corresponding periods the past few years chronicle in dramatic fashion Chevrolet's rapid rise to its high place in the industry. Here are the production figures for the first eight months of 1926 and 1927:

	1927	1926
Jan.	73,676	46,437
Feb.	85,817	51,303
Mar.	107,900	65,167
Apr.	111,939	71,157
May	115,623	74,617
June	112,794	77,241
July	87,134	50,999
Aug.	91,453	76,586

Manufacturing economies resulting from this enormous output were reflected in the announcement on Sept. 1 of a new low price for Chevrolet's latest model, the Imperial Landau, which now lists at only $745 f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

OLDSMOBILE BEGINS FACTORY EXPANSION

First Unit in $3,000,000 Program Will Be Completed This Month

The first building in the $3,000,000 Oldsmobile expansion program will be completed before the end of October, according to advices from factory officials at Lansing, Mich. It is expected that work of installing machinery and re-arranging production lines will be nearing completion before the first of the year.

This large expansion of plant and manufacturing facilities is striking evidence of the steady growth of Oldsmobile business. Hardly more than four years ago the Oldsmobile factories were thoroughly revamped, additional space taken and hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of new equipment installed for the manufacture of the Oldsmobile Six, which was introduced four years ago this month. At that time the facilities were believed adequate to take care of normal growth over a considerable period.

Since that time the demand for Oldsmobile has increased at a rate that made the earlier plant revision and expansion inadequate.

To make room for the new buildings now in course of construction, the Original Seager Engine Company's plant has been razed. This company was one of the pioneer marine gasoline engine builders and was acquired by Oldsmobile when this veteran automobile company began its first expansion more than a quarter of a century ago.

A new motor plant, duplicating the present one, is being erected on the site of the Old Seager engine factory. This is being built of faced brick and reinforced concrete and when completed, will double the capacity of Oldsmobile Motor Manufacturing facilities. Other departments are being expanded similarly.

200 MILES OF PIPE IN ONE TIRE PLANT

Refrigeration Plant Keeps Rubber at Right Temperature for Working

A vast system of 20 seperate lines of pipe totalling more than 200 miles is one of the most important equipment divisions of the factory, in Akron, where Miller tires are made. Pipe lines for steam heating vulcanizing and power, total 350,000 feet. The automatic sprinkler system for fire protection has the same huge total as the steam system.

Nearly two miles of pipe are required to transport gasoline, benzol and naphtha to various parts of he factory. These highly combustible liquids are confined to pipes and forced under pressure as a safety measure. Another safety factor is the total of more than 40,000 feet of conduit that houses electric wires for light power and telephones. Danger of damage to wires and danger of short circuits are eliminated by this large division of pipes.

Air lines for inflating tubes, cleaning tire molds, and many other purposes add more than a mile to the immense mileage. Drinking water at fountains over the factory is supplied by a small centrifugal pump in the refrigeration plant. In this plant, there is a total of more than 10 miles of pipe in addition to nearly two miles in the drinking water system The refrigeration plant, said to be the largest of its kind in the country, is maintained for keeping rubber stock at proper temperature while being mixed in the mills or rolled in the calenders. The water is forced through the mixing machines by a battery of centrifugal pumps at the refrigeration plant. Pipe lines are painted in different colors so that one line may be distinguished from the others.

ESSEX APPEARANCE SYMBOL OF QUALITY

It Is a Man's Car—Sturdy, Speedy, Comfortable and Has Fine Pick-up

Tests of the Essex Super-Six car on the streets tell the story of its remarkable 1927 popularity, in the opinion of John Adrians, Hudson-Essex dealer, who is studying and analyzing reasons for the success it has scored. His final conclusion is that no one quality could have made possible the consistent and growing Essex success — it must have taken a combination of many advantages.

"The handsome appearance of Essex cars," said Mr. Adrians, is just the outward symbol of this thorough design and quality. Essex cars have always been favorably known for easy riding qualities, and these new cars are in line with their predecessors.

"Rarely does an engineering department combine qualities of easy speed, fine braking power, smooth riding and effortless handling in a car as well as has been attained in this Essex Super-Six. In traffic it spurts quickly to the desired pace and the geers shift so smoothly that action with them is subconscious. A sudden swerve is needed and the wheel swings a finely balanced car as easily as a bicycle. There is a sudden stop to be made or a collision and the foot pedal is sufficient: quick acting stoppers grab the wheels like a grant hand.

"The street becomes rough and wavy: there is little jar felt and no necessity to hold on tight. The seats themselves are evidently made for those who like to sit restfully. They are like chairs in a man's club.

"Impressions of this car, the wheel, the seats, the roominess, the sturdy power and strength make it a masculine automobile. It can be "kicked around" a great deal And the average man always asks "How fast can she go?" At nearly a mile a minute it hugs the road without vibration or labor. The Super-Six principle of balance is at work.

"It is quick on the get-away, has that sweep of visibility demanded by modern drivers, is finished inside with the simple luxury that is in keeping with 1927, and it sings its song of the road with as little effort as a prima donna."

ALL-AMERICAN MOTIF IN OAKLAND'S SALON

Display Room in New York Depicts Early History of Michigan

A beautiful blending of Colonial furnishings and colorful wall murals, depicting early scenes when Michigan was the hunting ground of the Indian, instead of the home of the automobile, make the recently completed New York salon of the Oakland Motor Car company, a show place even among Broadway's multiple attractions.

The salon,a permanent exhibit of Oakland and Pontiac Sixes, is located in the new General Motors building on Broadway between 57th and 58th streets.

A. R. Glancy, president of the Oakland Motor Car company and Mrs Glancy, who have as their hobby the collection of early American furniture, assisted the Bodine-Spanjer-Janes company in planning the murals, decorative scheme and furniture.

The arrangement of the salon is such as to afford a highly appropriate American background both for the display of the new Oakland All-American Six, designed and manufactured to meet the requirements of American motorists, and for the Pontiac Six, named after the famous Indian chief who once ruled the district where the two cars are built. Both furniture and murals reflect the transition period from aboriginal to Colonial supremacy in Chief Pontiac's former domain.

The salon furnishings are Colonial even to specially woven "hook-rugs," arrowhead curtain poles and bull's-eye mirrors (converted into indirect lights) which follow faithfully the design of furnishings in the home of George Washington at Mt. Vernon. All of the furniture is copied from museum pieces, the desk being an exact duplicate of that used by Washington. The paneling, coloring and wall treatments, excepting of course the murals, are from a home at Woodbury, L. I., built in the middle of the Eighteenth Century.

The murals are from the brush of Paul Honore, one of America's foremost mural artists. They show with historical accuracy many events of the days when the white man was extending the western frontier into Michigan.

One mural represents Chief Pontiac and his birch bark canoe flotilla of painted warriors advancing to the siege of Detroit in 1763. Another shows the signing of the treaty of 1795 by which General Anthony Wayne of Revolutionary war fame obtained from the Indians the district which now includes the city of Pontiac and Oakland-co. Other murals picture various events which culminated in the establishment of a flour mill at Pontiac in 1918 on a site not far from the present plant of the Oakland Motor Car Company.

The tiny water power flour mill and an equally small saw mill constituted Pontiac's first industrial enterprises. They could be hidden one thousand times over in the gigantic Oakland factories which little more than a century later now stand in their stead.

BAD TERMINALS CAUSE SHORT BATTERY LIFE

"Loose terminals are often the cause of your battery discharging fast and even losing part of its life," says Mr. Al Schroeder of the Willard Storage Battery company. "Loose terminals mean poor connections and poor connections mean open circuits for the flow of battery current.

"It is carelessness on the part of the service man that your battery should go out of his station in anything but the best condition. Tightening the terminals takes only a few seconds and the service man in rendering this service assists the automobile driver in getting the best life from his battery—his perfect satisfaction.

"Tightening and greasing the terminals is one of the main points in Willard Five Point Inspection service. This service always includes testing each cell, replacing evaporation, cleaning the top of the battery, and tightening hold-downs and grounds when added as well as tightening, cleaning, and greasing the terminals."

DOG ADOPTS COONS

ERSKINE SIX SAVES MUCH ROOM ON ROAD

New Car Is Compact but Very Comfortable; Plenty of Leg Room

That the saving in road space made by the Erskine Six was accomplished with no sacrifice of comfort, luxury or roominess in the body, is regarded as one of the outstanding triumphs of automobile history. Such is the prevailing opinion of automobile experts and owners who, in the wake of the national automobile shows, have had opportunities to drive and take long rides in the "little aristocrat of motordom."

An interesting story behind the dimensioning of the Erksine Six body is related by its designer, R. H. Dietrich, whose custom bodies are identified with some of the highest priced cars in the world

"It is the usual custom," said Mr. Dietrich, "in designing a body to first model it from the outside. We did just the reverse in the Erksine Six. T started on the inside and designed the interior so as to provide the leg room, head room and elbow room that people want in a luxurious motor car. After I had determined on our interior dimensions, we statred on the outside of the body."

This unique way of designing the body of the Erksine Six will explain why it is everywhere pronounced as revolutionary in the comfort it provides.

"There are many small cars" said Mr. Curtis, local Studebaker dealer. "But there is only one small car that is also a fine car. That car is the Erksine Six. Owners of the most expensive cars have placed their stamp of approval on the Erksine—men who would not consider any other car so small and low priced.

"It may be surprising to some that the Erksine Six can be so compact, yet so comfortable. Men who complain about the shortness of Pullman berths mingle surprise with approval at the unusual leg room and head room of the Erksine. As the advertising copywriter says 'you can look over its top, but you can't overlook its roominess!' "

VANDERBILT IS PACKARD ADMIRER

Son of Rich Family Tells of His Experiences With Straight Eight

New Orleans, Ia.

Gentlemen: I must write you a line anent my departure for the North, concerning the remarkable performance of my Straight Eight Sport, in which Mr. Brodix and I arrived from Los Angeles on Monday evening.

We were four days upon the road between that city and this. We covered the entire 2213 miles in 57 hours and 50 minutes, which I believe is an average of about 39 miles an hour. At times we have had the car up to 78 miles; in every city where we saw a speed sign we slowed down to meet that regulation. We made most of our long distance speed on the desert and on ranges of the far Western country, where there is no speed limit. We were not stopped a single time by officers for violating any district regulation.

During the entire trip the car behaved splendidly. I did not have one minute's engine or body trouble. Two punctures were experienced. We traveled the whole way with the top down. We carried with us more than 800 pounds of baggage, including camping equipment, which we found entirely unnecessary, as there is not one spot along the road where it is necessary to camp: there being good hotels every hundred miles or so.

Although the temperature was often over 100 degrees, at no time did the engine overheat. I used about 13 quarts of oil on the trip. I regret, however, that I cannot give you the amount of gallons of gas consumed as I did not keep any figures for same.

The car is a 1924 model and had done more than 9000 miles in the West before starting the trip. We found all of the roads exceptionally good, particularly those in this state. The worst stretches lie near Yuma, Arizona; the Roosevelt Dam, Arizona and Liberty, Texas. There are not over 200 miles of poor roads from Los Angeles to New Orleans nor more than 300 miles of pavement. Most of the highways are of good dirt. All except 50 miles is passable in wet as well as dry weather. The slowest time made was in the more Eastern regions where our running time was impeded by numerous ferries, cross-washes, cattle on the road and little villages.

Needless to say I am more than ever a Packard admirer. I now own five, three of them being Eights. I have had Packards as far back as I can remember; and have made other cross-country trips in them, but never quite as quickly as this one. Some years ago Mrs. Vanderbilt, Mr. Brodix and some other friends and I went from New York to Seattle in my Twin Six in 13 days and thought we were traveling. I have owned almost every make of other car, too, but I wish to say, without the least hesitation, that the Straight Eight is the best car I have ever had the pleasure to drive.

Yours sincerely,
Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr.

INDIANS ADOPT AUTOS FOR BERRY HARVESTING

Minneapolis —(AP)— Minnesota Indians, hard put by pale face monopoly to earn a living, have taken a tip from the white man in harvesting their share of the fruits of the land.

Using collegiate flivvers instead of the usual scrawny horse, and outboard motors instead of slow-moving birch bark canoes, they are penetrating parts of the north country to gather the rich blueberry harvest that is unknown or inaccessible to the whites.

"VET" UNCONCERNED AT LEGION MEETING

Ancient Taxicab, Used During World War, Remains on Job in France

Amidst the gladness and merriment that characterized the reunion of members of the American Legion in Paris was one battle-scarred veteran that was little concerned about the event although in every respect entitled to a place of honor wherever veterans gathered. This "soldier" was one of about 4500 members of the A. E. F. that stayed on in France after the war ended, finding work there that they were eminently fitted to do and so continuing to serve as in the war.

These "soldiers" are Dodge Brothers cars that were used on the western front during 1917, 1918 and 1919 and later demobilized into civil life. The particular "veteran" referred to is a Dodge Brothers car that has been made over into a Paris taxicab, probably the dean of all taxis. Anyone who knows the service demanded from a taxicab in Paris will vote to put this car forward as a candidate for the Valhalla of all automobiles for it has been on the Paris streets six years, following its war service and a further term in private hands

This "veteran" averages 160 kilometers or about 100 miles per day for 320 days a year and during the past six years has rolled up the impressive total of 330,000 kilometers or 204,000 miles. Adding to this taxi mileage that piled up during the war and afterward under private ownership, the car's total mileage is nearly 280,000. The owner is still satisfied and during the Legion Convention used it to take its former "comrades de guerre" about the city.

SALE OF NEW DODGE CARS SETS RECORD

Export Shipments Reached 3,500 in September; Many Trucks Sold

Total passenger, commercial car and truck deliveries to customers by dealers, including export shipment, for the four weeks ended July 30 were 13,887, for the four weeks ended Aug. 27 were 17,175 and for the four weeks ended Sept. 24, 17,690. Current export shipments have been showing rapid increases, such shipments for July being 1,411, for August 2,707 and for September in excess of 3,500.

Company officials reported that for the six months ended June 30, 1927, net income available for dividends amounted to 5,020,271 with preference stock dividend requirements for the period of $2,931,250 For the two months ended August 31, 1927, such net earnings available for dividends were reported in excess of $1,800,000.00 to cover dividend requirements on the preference stock for such two months period of $977,083.

As at August 31, 1927, current assets were reported to be in excess of $47,000,000, of which over $13,500,000 was cash and over $5,500,000 marketable securities with current liabilities of about $18,000,000.

The truck division is doing the greatest business in its history, with shipments for July amounting to 2,557 vehicles, for August, 4,134, and for September in excess of 5,000 and with orders on hand in excess of 3,300. The various plants of the truck division at Detroit, Evansville, Stockton and Tornato are operating at capacity and production is being maintained at record levels.

In New York Jerry is amazed by newspaper reports of what has happened at Mineola. His stenographer stuns him with the information she saw Vera that morning and gave her one of the advertising booklets showing her pictures. Jerry gets a phone call and going to a given address finds the real Vivian Crandall whom the stenographer mistook for Vera. She tells Jerry about the shack in which her former husband was strangely interested. Meantime at the shack Vera enlists secretly the aid of HAPPY, one of the kidnapers, who honestly admires her, to protect her from the amorous advances of the prince. Happy agrees to stay up that night and protect her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XL

Breakfast that Friday morning—the second day after Vera Cameron's abduction by Prince Ivan—was a strained, unpleasant affair.

Vee-Vee had slept very little. She was wretchedly tired and her head ached dully from lack of sufficient ventilation. Spiritually and mentally she was at the lowest possible ebb, for she knew that today the more ruthless kidnaper, 'Satan', the instigator of the ransom enterprise, would return, possibly victorious, to take her back to civilization, the Crandalls and certain exposure.

The prince, his fat, round little face mottled with sleeplessness and dull anger because he had been thwarted at every turn, refused to eat the breakfast Vee-Vee had cooked over the glowing coals in the fireplace. He had abandoned all pretense of treating her as a princess and the woman he wanted to win to a reconciliation and remarriage. His popping blue eyes followed every movement she made, mocked her, promised, wordlessly, that he would have his revenge upon her.

"Happy" was almost as depressed and nervous as his prisoners. He made no secret of the fact that he was expecting his partner in crime at any moment and that he was frightened as to the outcome of the venture which he had opposed from the first. Twice while the sorry farce of breakfast was being played out "Happy" stamped to the door, unbolted it, and stood looking out toward the hills.

"The more I think of it the less I like this business," he muttered to Vee-Vee, after his second unsuccessful search of the heavens.

"Maybe Satan has come to the same conclusion," Vee-Vee suggested wearily. "I hope so. Don't you think you'd better clear out while you have a chance, Happy? You've been a good friend to me, and I don't want you to pay the penalty for Satan's greed."

Vee-Vee could only guess at the mental torture which the thwarted prince was undergoing. He was, as the kidnapers had pointed out to him, as guilty as they in abducting the supposed princess and heiress. If the kidnapers were caught, "Satan" and "Happy" would [illegible]

[illegible] had returned the [illegible] to her parents. [illegible]

Vee-Vee was washing dishes and the prince was playing a silly game of solitaire when "Happy" made his third reconnoiter from the door of the cabin. He stood there for some minutes, a hand shading his eyes which were upturned to search the sky. He was evidently expecting the return of Satan by airplane.

The prince, glancing up from his cards, saw the preoccupation of the kidnaper and rose stealthily from his seat. He advanced on tiptoe to the fireplace, wrested from Vee-Vee's hands the frying pan she was washing, and, still on tiptoe, advanced as noiselessly as a cat toward the kidnaper, whose back was turned to the room.

Wild thoughts flitted through the girl's brain. If the prince should succeed in knocking out the kidnaper the two of them—the prince and she—would be free. If he failed, if some slight noise or movement warned the kidnaper in time, the prince might very well die before her eyes. And the chances were of course a hundred to one that he would fail, for "Happy" had served a long apprenticeship in crime; he would not be easily disposed of by an amateur crook like the prince. If, on the other hand, he did succeed in stunning the kidnaper and disarming him, she would have lost her one friend, strange as that friendship was.

"Do you see anything, Happy?" she called out in a casual voice.

At her first word the prince stopped dead in his tracks, concealing the telltale frying pan behind his back, and the kidnaper turned his head to answer her:

"Nothing yet."

Fifteen minutes later, the kidnaper, still slouching in the open doorway, flung up the hand which nursed the pistol and waved it wildly over his head.

"There he is! He's going to land in the next field!"

Vera and the prince both ran to the doorway. But if they had had any thought of trying to escape, it was swallowed up in the terrible drama of the next few minutes. For as Vee-Vee stared over the kidnaper's shoulder, the plane, which had been circling under perfect control, suddenly dipped and careened wildly, plunging toward the earth at a sickening rate of speed.

"My God!" Happy cried out hoarsely. "Something's gone wrong. And he's going to land on that hill—in the tree tops—"

Before he had finished uttering his prophecy it had been fulfilled. The plane plunged straight for the hill, turning over and over as it whirled downward. Vee-Vee clapped a hand to her eyes to shut out the inevitable horror of the catastrophe, but she could not help hearing the crash, the splintering of wood. While she was still tremblingly shielding her eyes there came a terrific explosion, and she knew that "Satan" at least would never trouble her again.

During the next minute she scarcely knew what happened, for she was too violently nauseated by the thing that happened on the plane's [illegible] of the hill. She [illegible] her head [illegible] drawn [illegible] the door, and she [illegible]

When [illegible] consciousness she was lying on the lower bunk in the front [illegible] of the shack, and [illegible]

[illegible]

As her brain cleared, a dreadful recollection of what had happened came [illegible] sharply. "Happy," who had befriended her, protected her, was [illegible] "Satan" was [illegible] twisted mass of burned timber and steel. And she was alone with the prince—

That realization [illegible] gave her an almost superhuman strength. [illegible] the prince's breath [illegible] right hand. A moment later she had drawn from the pocket of her [illegible] skirt the [illegible] with which she had had the foresight to arm herself [illegible] With all her strength she [illegible] the sharp point of the [illegible] into the prince's [illegible] shoulder, which [illegible] still pressed crushingly into her chest.

He sprang up with a howl of rage and pain, his face livid, his hand clutched to his injured shoulder. Vee-Vee took instant advantage of her opportunity to slip from the bunk and to run toward the door. The prince gave her scarcely a glance; he was busy tearing off his coat to inspect his wound.

In that short flight from the bunk to the door she prayed a wild prayer that the door would be open that she could escape. Her fingers clawed at the rusty iron hasp of the door, and to her incredible relief it swung open. "Happy," in fleeing, had not forgotten his promise. At the risk of his own liberty he had decided not to lock her in the cabin with the prince, until he could make good his own escape.

She was stumbling down the three rotten steps of the cabin when she heard the thud of the prince's feet as he plunged across the floor after her. Reason halted her feet. She reached up, seized the door by its dangling padlock hasp, and pulled it shut, just as the prince, from within the cabin, hurled himself against it. Her teeth were chattering with fear but her fingers were as strong as steel as she lifted the padlock over the hasp and snapped the jaws into place. The prince beat upon the door, called wild, incoherent promises and threats to her, but she did not heed them.

She was fleeing down the faintly marked path, her feet winged with the joy of freedom, her brain too dazed to formulate any plans, even for the first stages of her flight, when a lusty shout came ringing and echoing across the little meadow in which the cabin lay:

"Vee-Vee! Wait! It's Jerry, Vera! Stop!"

In the next chapter Vee-Vee comes face to face with the woman she has been impersonating.

MORROW WILL BRING NEW PROSPERITY TO MEXICAN BUSINESS

Appointment as Ambassador Already Has Strengthened Position of Market

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of four articles on the appointment of Dwight W. Morrow as ambassador to Mexico. The stories give interesting glimpses behind the scenes in our relations with Mexico.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington—After buzzing around for several days to discover the real meaning of the appointment of Dwight Morrow as ambassador to Mexico, your correspondent is able to report that:

1—The appointment signifies a new method of dealing with Mexico which aims to supplant conservative bungling with conservative intelligence.

2—The appointment is deplored by one group in the Department of State and by those American oil interests which have worked behind the scenes to foment trouble between the two governments.

3—The appointment is gratifying to the government of Mexico.

Although there are few things to be said against President Coolidge's choice, it should be understood that the denials that the United States and the Morgan banking firm are sending a joint representative to Mexico may be swallowed in a saline solution. There may be loud yelps and whoops in the next Congress over this phase of the matter.

COLLECTING AGENT

The Morgan firm's chief interest in Mexico lies in the fact that it is the collection agent for more than half a billion dollars in Mexican bonds held in this country and abroad. Under the Pani-Lamont agreement, Mexico is paying nearly $15,000,000 a year in interest and it presumably will be part of Morrow's job to see that this interest keeps coming. He also will be interested in laying any possible groundwork for Mexico's eventual payment of the enormous principal.

It will be recalled that quotations on Mexican bonds shot upward when the Morrow selection was announced.

In attempting to analyze our Mexican policy, past and present, it must be remembered that there are two great classes of foreign investment in Mexico—the financial and industrial. Their interests do not always run parallel.

END OF CHEAP LABOR

First, there are the owners of oil wells, mines, lumber and land. It is not necessarily to the advantage of these investors to operate in a strong, prosperous Mexico.

Naturally, they do not relish facing restrictive laws enforced in the national interest and a prosperous Mexico means an end of miserably cheap labor to work in the fields, the mines, the timberland and on the soil. The oil, mining and lumber men disembowel the earth and shave the surface. Everything goes out and nothing comes in. Mexican resentment is directed against these interests.

Second, there is the sort of interest in Mexico which Morrow represents. There is Mexico's public debt, something more than $500,000,000, owed to foreign investors.

Then her approximately $200,000,000 in railroad bonds, perhaps half of which are backed by the government.

Then that annual $15,000,000 interest payment which Morrow's partner, Thomas W. Lamont, hatched and has since nurtured so carefully.

Then, finally, more than $150,000,000 in scrip which represents interest on bonds which went unpaid from 1913 to 1926, during Mexico's revolutionary and early reconstruction period.

Everyone who is interested in these various sums presumably wants Mexico to be prosperous and her government stable in order that she may pay.

These facts and knowledge of Morrow's past attitude lead one to believe that the new ambassador's attitude toward Mexico will be sympathetic and conservative. Morrow, whose intimacy with President Coolidge is well known, has often advised the president on the Mexican situation.

PROGRESS REPORTED BY TRUST COMMITTEE

Madison—(AP)—The 1927 legislature's interim committee on investment of state trust funds has concluded its first meeting here, under the chairmanship of Senator H. E. Boldt, Sheboygan Falls, and "report progress."

Senator Harry Sauthoff, Madison, and assemblymen J. D. Millar, Menomonie; Philip Nelson, Maple, and Edward Hilker, Racine, constitute the committee, which today reported that "trust funds of the state are now approaching the $25,000,000 mark, and are growing at the rate of more than $2,000,000,000 per year.

"For several legislative sessions there have been vague rumors that some of the investments made were not first class; and a still more pronounced feeling that all investments of state funds should be centralized in a single department," the committee announced. "It is for this reason that this interim committee was created and it announced that it will go into all of the investments made for all of the trust funds to find out what improvements should be made."

WINS EXECUTION CASE; NOW OPPOSES HANGING

Chicago—(AP)—Edwin Hedrick, a former assistant prosecuting attorney of Peoria county, has taken the stump against capital punishment. He says he became disillusioned about the death penalty after prosecuting successfully his first hanging case, for which he waited 12 years.

Hedrick was one of counsel for William D. Shepherd, who was acquitted on charges of complicity in the death of his millionaire ward.

The things all wanted - and at a price for all

The outright issue of what buyers want decides all car success today. On that basis, for the first nine months Essex has outsold any other "Six" at or near its price, almost two to one. It reflects overwhelming preference for the things Essex gives:

Super-Six Smoothness and Dash—High-compression Power and Performance—Size and Roominess without Unwieldiness—Steady Riding without useless Weight. 50 miles an hour all day long—and far greater speed when wanted—Riding Ease Like Gliding. Economy of Price, Operation and Maintenance.

Essex has made it vividly clear that compromise short of 6-cylinder luxury is not economy; and that greater price can buy no higher degree of mechanical fineness.

Its Super-Six motor develops more than 2½ times the power its size ordinarily rates it. It converts waste heat to power and gives the brilliant efficiency of high-compression performance, with an economy of fuel that is astounding.

With flashing pick-up and positive brake action you drive fast with safety in traffic. And with the physical restfulness of its smooth, vibrationless performance, you have also the mental ease of perfect braking safety, and instant, easy steering control.

In five beautiful and colorful bodies, handsomely finished and appointed, it meets every requirement of utility, convenience, fine appearance and pride of ownership.

MISS TALLEY SHOWS HER CONFIDENCE IN LIFE INSURANCE

Famous Singer Carries Half Million Dollar Policy in New York Life

Everyone knows something of the career of Miss Marion Talley who sang at the Memorial chapel to a packed house last evening. How she has won international fame as a great artist and also surprised the business world by a stroke of farsighted financial planning.

Only eight years ago at the age of 12, she had her first music lesson. After winning musical honors in high school, she sang Arline in the Bohemian Girl and was invited to sing before Galli-Curci and Schuman-Heink. Kansas City, touched by her voice and her youth, raised a fund to send her to New York and later abroad, where she studied under the great masters of Europe.

Two years ago, at the Metropolitan Opera House, the little Kansas City girl, 19 years old, made a triumphant debut before an immense audience, which included a trainload of loyal friends from her home town. She was an artistic sensation. Her name topped big head-lines in the newspapers all over the country. A simple, unspoiled girl from the West had won laurels for which many talented men and women ahve striven long years in vain.

But Miss Talley began to think of the future—of things she hoped to accomplish financially for those she loved, and of her home city which had helped her. She therefore insured her life in the New Lork Life Insurance Company for $500,000, of which $300,000 protects her father, mother and sister by trust arrangements; and the remaining $200,000, is payable to a trust company in Kansas City, and devoted, as she may arrange, to the musical education of talented Kansas City boys and girls who may be unable otherwise to secure such training.

Through life insurance this girl, at nineteen, instantly created an estate and arranged a noble benefaction—accomplishments which otherwise might be hoped for only at the close of a long and successful life.

There are thousands of men and women, who, like this young songbird have dreams of the future and wonder how their dreams can be made realities. Miss Talley has shown everyone how to make such beautiful dreams come true, how for example——to make life safe for themselves and loved ones.

—to assure the permanency of business.

—to endow a church, a college, or a hospital or to provide for some other cause to which they are deeply attached for the success they feel responsible.

Charles C. Baker and W. Frank McGowan represent the New York Life (a Mutual Company) in this community, call on them, they will gladly help you with your plans for the future.

AUTOMOBILE TOPS NEGLECTED UNTIL ALMOST TOO LATE

Motorists Pay Too Much Attention to Engine; Not Enough to Tops

"Many automobile owners forget all about the top of their cars in their anxiety to see that the engine is in good running order or that the tires are good for another 2,000 miles, until the frame of the top starts to rot and the damage is forcibly brought to their atention," says William O. Siewert of the William O. Siewert auto trimming company at 514 N. Appleton-st. "When they find out that the frame on the top of the car is rotting they wonder how it passed their notice."

The cause of the trouble lies in the fact that too many motorists let the top of the car crack open and water get in without their notice, according to Mr. Siewert. After a time the water rots the frame, and the damage is done, and the car must be taken to a repair man and fixed. If the owner had the top looked over, it is Mr. Siewert's opinion that he probably would have saved himself several dollars and many hours of inconvenience.

The heavy rains of the past two weeks did much damage to sedan tops. According to Mr. Siewert this is just the time to have the tops looked over and repaired if necessary, to prevent further damage. The process takes but a few moments, he said, and can be done at a very nominal charge. Any top which is over two years old should be inspected or re-covered, in the opinion of Mr. Siewert.

The repairing of seat covers is another item about which Mr. Siewert can offer many suggestions. Seat covers of all kinds become shabby or torn after a period of use and must, therefore, be changed to give a car its real value. Mr. Siewert also advises that persons having side curtains to be repaired hav this work done now before extremely cold weather sets in, when there will be a great rush to have the work done.

Government Ownership Is Feared By All Utilities

Babson Park, Mass.—In his weekly interview, Rober W. Babson Saturday discussed the public utility situation, both from an investment point of view and from a political point of view. In referring, however, to public utilities, he especially has in mind electric light and power companies. Water companies are largely municipally owned, gas companies have no serious rate problem facing them; while street railway rates are automatically regulated by the use of automobiles. The telephone interests are in a class of their own.

"Only students of public utilities realize the tremendous growth which they have enjoyed during the past few years," he said. "I estimate that the total capital invested in public utilities today, in the United States and Canada, exceeds $23,000,000,000 and within 12 months will be in excess of the total invested in the railroads. During the past six years public utilities have led all other industries in the investment of new capital. In 1926 over $1,500,000,000 of new capital was invested in public utilities and by 1928 this figure will approach $2,000,000,000.

"Not only are public utilities rapidly becoming the greatest industry in the United States and Canada, but the industry itself is becoming the most popular from an investment point of view. Furthermore, they are not dependent upon general business conditions, which results in the elimination of the speculative feature. For instance, the Babsonchart has dropped from 8 per cent above normal a year ago to normal at the present time, while the number of kilowatt-hours of electricity sold has increased during this period. The amount of electricity sold is one of several barometers of business conditions, but is the most stable of them all. Irrespective of general business conditions during the next few years, the public utility business is bound to be good.

DEMAND WILL INCREASE

"The demand for electricity is sure to increase for some years to come. Every day factories are giving up their independent steam power plants and substituting electric power in place thereof. The time is not far distant when electric power will be universal in industry. Only about half of the homes in this country are now wired for electricity. This percentage will continue to grow until at least 90 per cent of the homes have electric current.

The uses for electricity are constantly increasing. The electric refrigerator is destined to become almost universally used. Other household inventions are on the way, such as a universal dish washer. Electric fans, vacuum cleaners and other utilities are constantly on the increase. Every meal which I have had in my home for the past ten years has been cooked by electricity. The possibilities in the development of the violet ray, the radio and other inventions will greatly increase the use of electricity.

"Not only is the demand for electricity increasing, but the cost per kilowatt-hour is constantly being reduced by the development of larger generating units and the interconnection of properties. The telephone business is greatly handicapped because the cost per subscriber increases as the number of subscribers increase: but with the electric business, the reverse is true. The greater the number of electric light and power subscribers, the lower the cost per subscriber. Moreover, the labor cost is much more favorable to electric companies than for railroads and other corporations. Where a large part of the income from railroads, street railways, and industrial companies goes to labor, only a small portion of the income of electric companies is required to pay labor, even though the electric companies pay the highest wages of all. This results in largely eliminting labor troubles and also enables the corporations to pay good salaries and secure the finest engineers, executives and other employes.

TWO BUGABOOS

There are two bugaboos before all investors in public utilities. One of these is the fear of government ownership. It is strongly rumored that an attempt will be made in the next Congress to have the government take over certain important public utility enterprises. Those behind this movement point to the low rates which Seattle and certain Canadian cities have, which operate their electric power properties either municipally or governmentally. The fight about Muscles Shoals and Boulder Dam is really centered about this plan of whether the people will be better off with or without government ownership. A concerted and successful movement toward government ownership might seriously affect the securities of some public utility companies.

"Personally, I don't fear government ownership, but am more troubled by the second cloud in the sky; namely, unfavorable rate decisions. Where state authorities are able to determine rates, I see no advantages to government ownership and many disadvantages to government ownership. Therefore, it seems to me that the opponents to public utilities will ultimately direct there attention toward rate reductions rather than toward government ownership. Hence, the real unfavorable feature facing public utility investors, is the question of rate reductions. Without doubt, the future of most public utilities is in the hands of the rate making bodies of their respective states. With the increased demand, constantly lowering expense of operation, and the monopoly which each company possesses the rise and fall of the securities will ultimately depend upon the rates allowed by the respective state public utility commissions.

NOTHING TO FEAR

"The investment bankers believe that since the supremo court decision on the Southwestern telephone case, security holders have nothing to fear from rate reductions. This decision took the position that a company is entitled to earn a net investment of 6 per cent or more, not only on the capital invested, but also on the growing value of the concern. The court gave a liberal interpretation of this value, basing this value on the cost of production including expense of securing franchises and building up the business. The court based its decision on the amendment of the Constitution which was passed in the sixties, insuring negroes certain property rights. It, however, should be remembered that this Southwest telephone case was not an unanimous decision of the Supreme Court, but that certain judges dissented therefrom. They brought out the fact that neither public utilities nor corporations of any sort were thought of when this special amendment was added to the Constitution.

"Recently the public utility commission of Massachusetts has apparently taken the side of the minority members of the Supreme Court in ordering the city of Worcester, Massachusetts, to materially reduce its rates. The Massachusetts theory is that the Worcester company is entitled to 6 per cent, or perhaps even 8 per cent, on the amount of money actually invested by the stockholders; but is not entitled to interest on the reproduction value of the property irrespective of the amount invested. The theory established in Massachusetts seems to be that the investors of legitimate money should be protected, but—owing to the fact that such investors benefit from a monopoly—they are not entitled to any unearned increment. Personally, I believe that the ultimate position of the Supreme Court will be something half way between the decision in the case of the Southwestern Bell Telephone and the position taken by the Massachusetts authorities.

SWORD LINE STILL IS ENFORCED BY COMMONS

London —(AP)—A. N. Skelton was addressing the house of commons in the presence of a mere handful of members when he was suddenly assailed with shouts of, "order!"

There was nothing uparliamentary in his remarks and Mr. Skelton was at a loss to know just how he had offended until someone pointed to his foot.

The toe of one shoe was about one inch beyond the strip of cloth which runs along the floor in front of the front benches. It is out of order for a member to step beyond that line while speaking from a front bench.

The line is a survival of the days when the members of parliament carried swords. So long as a member was behind the line his sword point could not reach an opponent opposite.

FIRE WOOD CHEAP FUEL IF RIGHTLY USED IN STOVES

If Used Rightly, Will Give as Much Heat as Any Soft Coal on Market

"Wood fires can give just as much heat and leave a lasting bed of coals the same as any soft coal on the fuel market," says Elmer Knoke of the Knoke Lumber company, 331 N. Linwood-ave, "but the bad thing about it is that so few people know how to handle a wood fire to get the greatest benefit from it. Many persons throw wood into a stove or furnace to be followed by more after the first few pieces burn away and think little about the waste from the product."

A tremendous saving would be made on fuel bills if peoplek new how to use wood correctly for heating and general stove and furnace purposes, according to Mr. Knoke. However, they care little about learning correct procedure and are content to use wood in stoves and furnaces only to take the chill off a room in late fall and early spring. Speaking of savings in fuel bills, it is said that is one reason the Knoke Lumber company mill was established in Appleton—to adequately and cheaply fill the demands of wood users in this city.

NO HANDLING CHARGES

Fire wood from the Knoke Lumber company can be sold cheaply because there are practically no handling charges involved. In the case of green wood, which is the best to use to get a maximum of heat, the trimmings from logs being sawed into lumber are sent through the mill "butcher" and sawed into carts for delivery at homes. This method with its lack of overhead expense permits the company to sell the fuel at a dollar a load less than dealers who must unload, load and unload again before they have finished putting the wood in the customer's yard.

Dry wood goes through the latter process, being unloaded from bins to places where it can dry, then loaded into trucks and then again to be unloaded. It is for that reason the $1 extra charge is made.

Knoke Lumber company also sells wood for fireplace use and finds that there is quite a demand for that particular type of fuel in Appleton. Hardwood stakes from each carload of logs are sawed into convenient lengths for fireplace use. When there is a shortage of these the regular body wood from logs is used. Customers always get the best article possible in this case.

The youngest president of the United States was Theodore Roosevelt, who was inaugurated at the age of 42.

Kid gloves are so called because thy originally were made from kidskin. Now, only the finest are made from this material ,and the ordinary kid glove is made from lambskin.

Lighting an American match in Peru may cause a fine of $20. A Swedish match company has a monopoly on the sale of matches in that country.

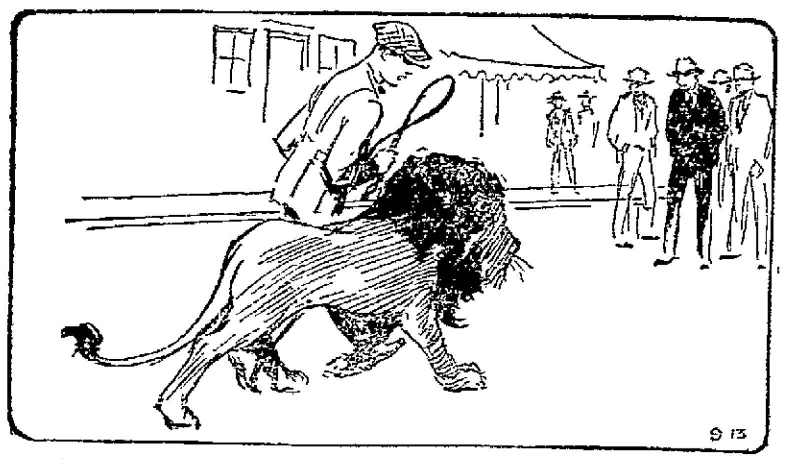
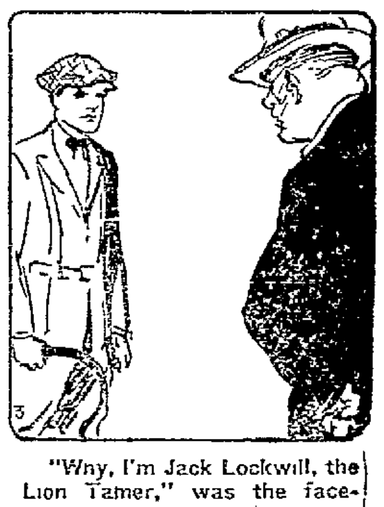
JACK LOCKWILL, THE LION TAMER



The animal rose obediently, and stood beside the boy. "Now, you old rascal," said Jack, "we're going to take a walk back to the circus grounds. You must get into your cage again before some excited individual gets out his gun and fills you full of lead. March, Leo!" He turned the creature about and headed it toward the watching men, who were now jabbering wildly.

As Jack drew near the group, with the lion walking at his side, one of the men, a huge, bullet-headed fellow, stepped out from the others. "Who are you?" he asked.



"Why, I'm Jack Lockwill, the Lion Tamer," was the facetious answer. "My instructor in the art of handling these ferocious beasts was the Great Raoul Delano."

At the sound of that name, the big man gave a start and looked greatly surprised. "Raoul Delano!" he exclaimed. "Do you know that worthless fakir?" "Do I know him?" Jack laughed. "I'll say so! As he is ill and unable to go through with his act today, I'm here to take his place." "Not much!" roared the man. "I'm Redmond Saunders, and I'm taking his place!" (To Be Continued)

THE NUT CRACKER

At bridge he trumped his partner's ace.
And bedlam then broke loose.
Although he played a seven spot,
He really played the deuce.

He bought himself a real cheap suit.
He thought that it would please.
The rain came down and soaked
it. Now
It reaches to his knees.

Said he "I'll start pole vaulting and
New records they will find."
When half way up he found he'd left
The bloomin' pole behind.

CLINTONVILLE FIRM ENDS SUCCESSFUL CANNING SEASON

Small Crops Result in Increased Demand — Unable to Fill Orders

Clintonville—The Clintonville Canning company closed its season Thursday. Due to the long continued drought during the growing season, there was only a half crop of corn. Eight hundred acres of corn yielded 13 carloads of the canned product, while the same acreage last year gave 6 carloads. The entire 1927 output has been sold and R. A. Greb, the general manager of the plant said that demand has greatly exceeded the supply. He said they receive wires and telephone calls and letters every day with orders which they cannot fill.

This plant was built in April, 1926. This year the company installed equipment for canning beans about 180 acres were planted, and in spite of the unfavorable weather conditions, the yield and the quality of the beans were excellent. The firm had 24 car loads of beans and could have used much more had it been available. It supplies hotels, restaurants and institutions which use these goods in large quantities.

This year 452 farmers of this vicinity have been engaged in raising these two crops, Mr. Greb said. The management has decided to install further equipment for canning beans, to double the acreage for next year.

During the canning season the firm employ 90 people, and there is a small force working all the year. The increased production will require doubling the working force.

It is expected that receiving stations will be organized in some of the neighboring towns and send out trucks to bring the crop in to the local plant.

The canning of beans began the last week in July and was continued through nearly the entire corn season. The company raises its own seed corn, and at present the ceiling of the store rooms is filled with seed racks upon which the corn is being cured. During the winter it will be taken down and shelled, sorted and graded. By the process of selecting and discarding from year to year, the quality of the seed used will be built up.

The bean seed used, is raised in Idaho, on the irrigated lands. Climatic conditions are such in that state that disease and rust resisting plants are produced, making the beans very desirable for seed.

At present 24 process kettles are used in the retort room, each holding 1,350 two pound cans or 244 ten-pound cans. Additional equipment will be instaled in every department as needed for handling the increased production.

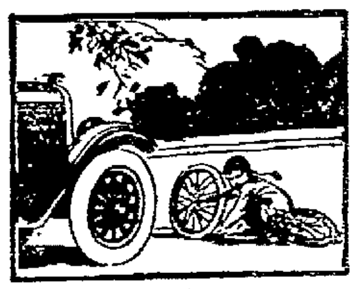
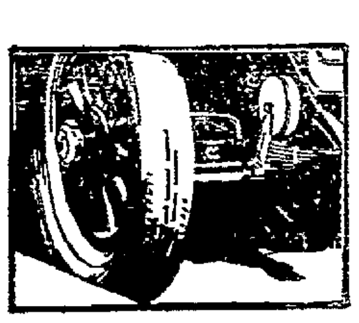
No other car at anything like the Whippet's price offers you the modern advantages of the Whippet—utmost gasoline economy, the safety of BIG 4-wheel brakes, low center of gravity, more leg room, full vision bodies, force-feed lubrication and many more.

Expert engineering and the friendly suggestions of more than 125,000 loyal owners have developed the finer Whippet of today. Come in and see the car which sets the pace for 1928.



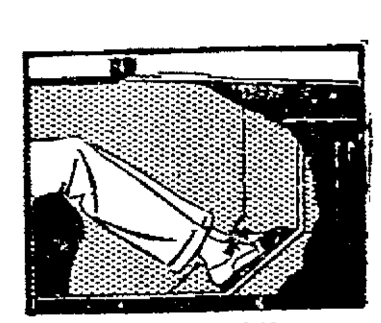
BIG 4-wheel brakes make Whippet the safest light car.



Oversize balloon tires and genuine Gabriel Snubbers insure smoother riding.

Narrow front body posts eliminate the "blind spot" hazard and permit clearer vision.

The most economical light car. Whippet holds the A. A. A. Coast-to-Coast economy record.



Whippet affords appreciably greater leg room than any other light car.

Extra 'Phone Operators Handle Accident Calls

Seven extra telephone operators and two extra supervisors were pressed into service at the local exchange of the Wisconsin Telephone company in order to handle calls resulting from the accident Friday morning at the Kimberly-Clark company mill at Kimberly.

F. N. Belanger, acting district manager of the telephone company, said Saturday morning that he has no record of the number of calls handled, but the amount of power used in transmitting the calls was four times that of normal.

The first rush of calls started at 10 o'clock, directly after the accident. The telephone operators called all the doctors in the city and vicinity and reported back to the police the names of those they secured to go to Kimberly. When this was out of the way the other calls started to come in. In addition to the newspaper calls to cities within a radius of several hundred miles, hundreds of calls were handled where friends called people who had relatives working at the mill, to find out whether they had been hurt in the accident.

The remainder of the calls were neighbor-to-neighbor,—that is, people "just wanting to talk" to someone else about the accident.

There was some inconvenience to local businessmen on account of the first calls but no complaints have been received. On the other hand, Mr. Belanger has been complimented on the way his office handled the increased amount of business without disruption of service.

LAWRENCE HARRIERS WIN CROSS COUNTRY RACE

In the order named, they were: Mueller, Jesse, Menning, Wolf and Pinkerton. Kummelein, Umbs and Hoffman, all of Milwaukee, finished in eighth, ninth and tenth places, respectively.

6 DEAD, 19 INJURED AND 3 MISSING IN KIMBERLY DISASTER

Papermill Officials Request Inquest—Three More Men Taken from Wreckage

the positions of Johnson, Manders and Despin, still missing, and are bending every effort to reach them.

A huge crane, brought from Oshkosh in parts by motor truck, was erected early Saturday morning on the roof of the building east of the collapsed section and is hoisting heavy pieces of debris and machinery from the pit. It is believed the three missing men are buried beneath a beater.

Rescue squads were working in three hour shifts because of the effort in the pit for more than that time is too strong. New shifts were put to work at 12 o'clock, Friday night and every three hours thereafter.

Officials of the company said Saturday that mill operations would not be resumed before next Tuesday. Between 1,000 and 1,200 men are out of work. Of this number between 800 and 900 are employed by the paper company, while the Meyer Construction company employs between 200 and 300.

The little village of Kimberly, with its 1,100 inhabitants, scarcely slept Friday night. Anxious relatives, friends and neighbors haunted the grounds about the Kimberly mill, which covers nearly 15 acres of land, awaiting word from the rescue squads.

Bulletins were published as often as conditions warranted by company officials, and the large number of uneasy relatives and friends and curiosity seekers surged back and forth from the bulletin board to the gate leading into the mill yards. It was through this gate the injured were taken to the hospital.

The heroism of two girls, Miss Annette Vander Zanden, 19, Kimberly, and Miss Anna Arnoldson, 21, Little Chute, who worked continuously in the mill kitchen for 24 hours, serving hot coffee and sandwiches to the rescurers, is told by the workmen. The girls started work early Friday morning and without even asking for relief they worked continuously until Saturday morning. Workmen had many words of praise for the young women who helped keep up the courage of the rescuers with their cherry words and smiles as they passed out sandwiches and coffee. It is reported that more than 150 gallons of coffee and many thousand sandwiches were consumed.

A prank of fate is seen in the deaths of Norbert Goffard and Otto Krueger, both of whom were working on earlier shifts that week, for their partners. Goffard it is reported, was working for his partner whose wife was sick. Both Goffard and Krueger were working the 7 to 3 o'clock shift instead of the 3 to 11 o'clock.

Two cars were stolen at Green Bay on Oct. 1. Rewards of $25 have been offered for recovery of each. One was a Dodge roadster, 1920 model, motor number 664.266: serial number 611.-503. The other car was a Ford coupe, 1924 model, motor number 9.673.717.

CAPACITY AUDIENCE IN CHAPEL HEARS MISS TALLEY SING

Youthful Prima Donna Presents Interesting Concert to Record Crowd

Marion Talley, the highly advertised and winsome young prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Co., sang to a capacity audience in Lawrence Memorial chapel Friday night. It was the first number of the Community Arist series.

Whether Miss Talley lived up to her advance notices probably is being debated in many homes today. She is without doubt a splendid artist, revealing a thorough mastery of the technique of her profession. Her control indicates long and earnest hours of study and work.

Miss Talley they say, is not more than 20 years of age and she doesn't look a day older. It was an experience to see so young a person stand on the stage of Lawrence Memorial chapel where so many of the greatest artists of the world have thrilled audiences, but none as large as the audience which hoped to be thrilled by Miss Talley. And a great many of the people were thrilled by her concert.

The sprightliness and vim and vigor which Miss Talley displayed in her concert proved her youth. Every movement was rapid and her walk was almost a run; she acted as though she enjoyed her work.

A difficult program was offered by the young artist and she presented it well. She was unusually generous in responding to encores.

Assisting the artist was John Corigliano, violinist, and a finished artist. His second group was greeted with hearty applause and there was an insistent demand for his return to the platform even after he played his second encore.

Stewart Willie, accompanist for the two artists, is an accomplished musician, such as one would expect to accompany artists of the standing of Miss Talley and Mr. Corigliano.

PUBLIC SERVICE IS AMONG ACTIVITIES OF WOMANS CLUB

Large Amount of Time and Energy Devoted to Employment Bureau

All types of calls for service have come to the office of Appleton Womans club during the past year, according to Mrs. Elizabeth Engel, office secretary, who discussed the scope of the work by the club.

About half of Mrs. Engel's time is devoted to the employment and rooms registry service. At the last survey 65 girls were registered for general housework, 14 cooks, 28 nurses, practical and graduate, 99 cleaning women, 48 girls who wish to care for children part time, 20 college girls who are registered for various sorts of work, 7 cateresses, 25 mill and factory girls, 47 applicants for office positions, 8 orchestras, 13 sewing and mending women, and 10 waitresses.

The employment agency at the club has in the last seven months assisted every restaurant and first-class hotel in the city to secure help. Besides calls from Appleton women, requests have come from Oshkosh, Forest Junction, Brillion, Hilbert, Neenah Menasha and New London for various kinds of help. Letters from women and girls looking for employment, within a radius of 50 miles have been received. One inquiry came from Cloquet, Minn., Mrs. Engel said.

A perplexing phase of the employment department is the problem of finding work for a young mother who is trying to support herself and child by doing house work. Few jobs of this type are available although many hours have been spent in the investigation of possibilities along this line.

Rooms listed by Appleton Womans club are visited in early September and are definitely classified. Visiting the rooms has been found to furnish a good contact, according to the office secretary.

Social service has also come to be handled by the club as specific cases have needed aid. As there is no settlement worker in Appleton this work has been referred to the club. In one instance the court asked the organization to receive the parole of a girl who had become a public nuisance.

BALKAN NATIONS HEAD TOWARD WAR

Jugo-Slavia and Balkans Find Relations at Highest Tension Since 1912

Belgrade — (AP)—Relations between Jugo-Slavia and Bulgaria were at their highest point of tension Saturday since the Balkan war of 1912.

The Jugo-Slav minister in Sofia was under instructions to demand disbandment of the comitadji (irregular) bands in Macedonia, on the alternative of a diplomatic break. The border was closed, and Jugo-Slav troops were seeking to stamp out the Macedonian territories, reported to be roaming the region, seeking favorable opportunities to carry out their bombing raids.

The good effect of the recent conference of Jugo-Slav and Bulgarian statesmen directed at removing cases of friction, has been almost entirely undone.

OFFICER ARRESTED ON DRUNK DRIVING CHARGE IN ONEIDA

Teacher Is Complainant; Farmer Also Arrested After Accident

Josiah Charles, town of Oneida Indian constable, pleaded not guilty when arraigned Saturday morning in municipal court on a charge of driving while drunk, and his trial was set for Oct. 22. Joseph Van Kamp, town of Oneida farmer, arrested by Deputy Sheriff Walter Sherck at the time he arrested Mr. Charles, pleaded not guilty on a similar charge and will be tried on Oct. 21.

Robert Murphy, a farmer living in the town of Oneida, was driving in a runabout on highway 54 and turned to go up the driveway to his farm. With him was his wife and child.

According to the story of Van Kamp Murphy stopped before making the right hand turn into his farm and he—Van Kamp—ran in to him. Coming from the opposite direction was Russell Eaton, a school teacher, who was taking three of his pupils to their homes. Van Kamp said he ran into Mr. Murphy's car while trying to avoid hitting Mr. Eaton's car.

Constable Charles came up in his car, at that time and confiscated Mr. Eaton's car, stating that Mr. Eaton was driving without a license. Mr. Eaton protested and showed a receipt for his application for a license and half an hour later the constable returned his car, according to Deputy Sherck.

Mr. Eaton, then swore out warrants against Constable Charles and Mr. Van Kamp, charging them with driving while drunk.

STOCK MARKET HAS REACTIONARY TONE

Special Buying Develops in Public Utility Groups in Early Trading

New York—(AP)—Reactionary price tendencies characterized the opening of Saturday's stock market. Initial losses of a point or so were recorded by Missouri Pacific Pfd., Case Threshing Machine and Colorado Fuel. Sterling Cables were quoted at $4.87, the highest since December, 1914.

Special buying again developed in the public utility group, American Telephone touching a new high record at 183 and Montana Power at 109¾ in the first few minutes of trading. Outside the strength of sterling there was little of interest in the foreign exchange market.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

October 9th to 15th

"LET'S KEEP FIRE OUT OF APPLETON"

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK PROCLAIMED BY MAYOR

Mayor A. C. Rule Monday set aside Oct. 9-15 as Fire Prevention week and issued a proclamation requesting citizens to use care in reducing loss from fires to a minimum during that week.

The proclamation says:

Whereas there has been a large annual loss of life and great property damage caused by fires and

Whereas this movement has for its objective the noble purpose of saving life and property from needless and wanton destruction.

Therefore I, Albert C. Rule, mayor of Appleton, do hereby proclaim Oct. 9-15 as Fire Prevention week and earnestly request the co-operation of all residents of this city in preventing destructive fires during the week.

(Reprinted from the Appleton Post-Crescent of Monday, October 3, 1927.)

SAFETY WEEK WILL BE OBSERVED

Governor Deplores Loss of Life in Proclaiming Fire Prevention Week

Madison—(AP)—Announcing the Fire and Accident Prevention week for Wisconsin Oct. 9 to 15, the state industrial commission today gave out a booklet on fire fighting and prevention.

The booklet is opened with the proclamation of Governor Zimmerman setting the week as one toward fire prevention and deprecating the large annual losses by fire.

The governor earnestly counsels each community, each civic body and organization and each individual to take an active part in this movement which has for its objective "the noble purpose of saving life and property from needless and wanton destruction."

The week opens on the anniversary of the Chicago fire, not to commemorate that disastrous event, but rather to call attention to the deplorable fire waste, loss of life and bodily injuries throughout the country," according to the bulletin.

The industrial commission publication gives a long summary of the intent of the week, suggests activities for the week tending to impress its importance and suggests a program for schools to carry out one day of the week.

It then gives help and reminders and fire prevention "dont's," outlines heating plant hazards, asks a series of questions designed to reveal fire hazards, lists safely rules for use in case of fire, gives an essay on the use of matches by children and the careless use of smokers' articles, and concludes with an item on "knowing and respecting gasoline."

(Reprinted from the Appleton Post-Crescent of Monday, October 3.)

The most disreputable character in town is Fire. He is our vilest murderer, one of our biggest thieves, our most treacherous enemy. Let's all cooperate to run him out of town.

In 1925 the average burning rate for the nation as a whole was $1,504,279 every day. Last year it was larger, figure it out to minutes, and you see that $1,044 goes up in smoke every time your watch ticks off sixty seconds.

And remember this---two out of every three fires are preventable. That means that two out of every three fires here and in other countries are caused by ignorance or carelessness.

This is Fire Prevention Week---a time to give serious thought and take serious action. Let's all learn to be sure that our matches, cigars and cigarettes are out before we toss them aside, let's make sure that chimneys and flues are in good condition. Let's keep our homes, stores and factories clean and free from rubbish. Let's build as safely as we can and take every means to protect that which we build.

Let's all do everything we can to run Fire out of town
